VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Open to the public tomorrow (Jan. 10), the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg has been perceived and described in many different ways over its 82 years.

However, there is no other agricultural exhibition that matches it, according to Dennis Grumbine, its director.

"Where else on earth can you take a family and spend the day enjoying as educational a show as this, free of charge?

"It costs a lot more to take the family to a movie, and that only lasts three hours."

Grumbine, a long time Farm Show exhibitor, supporter and member of the Farm Show Commission, may be biased in his assessment, but the facts are not.

Fact: No other show in the world provides Pennsylvania with the opportunity to promote its multi-dimensional agricultural industry, as well as being able to provide accurate, non-misleading public education of the industry.

Fact: No other show promoting Pennsylvania production and agribusiness attracts such a diverse audience from so many different lifestyles and regions of the world.

Fact: No other Pennsylvania show provides a forum for farmer and non-farmer to learn, observe, and to walk away with a better understanding of the immensity, diversity and importance of Pennsylvania's agrarian and entrepreneurial enterprises.

For the agribusiness industry (covers all commodities, processed foods and services), what it means is that Pennsylvania products are promoted to both potential in- and out-of-state buyers.

Most of the other special-interest shows held throughout the year target sales to in-state farmers and agribusiness people.

That is not bad, but the difference is that the Farm Show promotions are designed to help increase in-state income and profitability by increasing sales income.

For the production farmer, what it means is the ability to learn about

Shawn, left, and Matthew Beam, Elverson, plan to make great strides at their first Farm Show. Matthew, 12, is in the sixth grade at Conestoga Christian School in Morgantown. Brother Shawn, 9, is in the third grade at the school. Matthew and Shawn are taking two York/Hampshire crossbred hogs, with genetics obtained by their cousin Nelson Beam, Elverson and uncle Brian Beam, Lebanon, to the Farm Show. See story page A22. Photo by Andy Andrews

David Semmel, archivist, talks about his first visit to the Pennsylvania Farm Show in 1932. As a 6-year-old, Semmel couldn't resist taking a lick from an ice cream cone that a vendor held out to entice visitors to buy. To learn more about farm show visits, and Semmel and his wife Mary who live in Slatington, turn to page B14. Photo by Lou Ann Good.

Here's The Annual Farm Show Issue

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Again the Pennsylvania Farm Show promises to be the premier winter event for farmers and exhibitors who make their living in the business of agriculture. Of course, it's a fun time to meet friends and neighbors or show off the homestead's best livestock, produce, or crafts. In recent years, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has invited foreign buyers interested in machinery and products to attend the Farm Show.

This issue of Lancaster Farming is dedicated to the Farm Show that runs from January 10 to 15. We have meeting schedules and times for livestock, crop, home and youth exhibitions. We also have numerous on-farm interviews with families who enjoy bringing their prize exhibits to the Farm Show. Advertising messages and the building layouts will help you to find the products, services, and events you want to explore.

National Grain Market

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids were pressured lower by profit taking, lack of fresh ex- port demand and lower corn and bean bids. Corn and soybean bids turned lower on continued slow export orders and lower Asian currency Markets. Wheat 1 to 7 cents lower. Corn 2 to 4 cents lower. Sorghum 6 to 7 cents lower. Soybeans 4 to 11 cents lower. Fund selling on the board undermined wheat bids today. Continued lack of foreign sales, despite indications there is some interest, pushed wheat bids lower. Corn and soybean bids weakened in reaction to lower Asian currency; The Thailand Baht, The Indonesia Rupiah, The Malaysia Ringgit, and The Philippines Peso. Beneficial rains in South Africa also weighed on corn bids. Export sales remain nil for corn and soybeans this week. A large U.S. soybean crush for last week, limited bean losses but slow soyoil demand added weakness.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

FULL WOLF MOON, JAN. 12.

INDOMITABLE CAPRICORNS

January 14 is reputed to be a propitious day for the birth of women. Marjorie Weinzweig, philosophy professor and author of A Philosophical Approach to Women's Liberation, was born on January 14. Faye Dunaway, noted film actress, is another January 14 birthday, along with actress and winner of the Medal of Freedom, Bebe Daniels. There are some ...ty notable men as well: Nobel peace prize winner Albert Schweitzer, journalist Andy Rooney, and actor and novelist Thomas Tryon.

Experience teaches you to recognize a mistake when you've made it again.

TIP OF THE WEEK

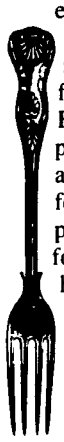
APPLE DUMPLINGS

2 cups flour
2-1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup milk
6 apples, peeled and cored
1/2 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
4 tablespoons butter, softened

Sift together first three ingredients, cut in shortening, add milk, and stir Knead lightly and roll 1/8 inch thick Divide dough into 6 parts and place an apple on each piece. Mix together brown sugar, cinnamon, and butter, and fill hollow of apples. Fold dough over apple, pinch together edges, and prick tops with a fork. Place in a shallow pan and bake at 425° F for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350° and bake for about 30 minutes more, or until apples are tender Serve with cream



Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

The full Moon brings fair weather.

The full Moon eats clouds.

Pale Moon doth rain, red Moon doth blow, white Moon doth neither rain nor snow.

When 'round the Moon there is a brugh [halo], the weather will be cold and rough.

OPINION

We're Looking For You

The Super Bowl of Pennsylvania agriculture is scheduled to start today in the Farm Show Complex at the corner of Cameron and Maclay streets in Harrisburg. As usual, farmers go to the show to meet friends, see how their neighbors' entries placed in the animal, plant, and youth shows, and investigate the newest in agriculture products and services.

Actually, the Farm Show has become more than just a farmers' show. Pennsylvania's $44 billion ag industry now uses this showcase to forage good relations between agriculture and the urban areas of the state. In addition, the international guests that have been invited give those companies interested in the export market an opportunity to forage business relationships with foreign officials.

The heart of the Farm Show is still the commercial exhibits, the animals, the food, and the family living and agricultural learning centers. A record premium bank of $247,138 will provide the incentive to bring the prize exhibits out in the uncertain January weather.

While the entry numbers are down because no poultry will be shown this year, still over 9,000 entries are registered in 30 departments. In addition, 325 commercial companies will show their wares to the 250,000 people who may show up if the weather is nice.

The show runs from today, Saturday, January 10 to Wednesday, January 14, and is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day, except the last day when the show closes at 4 p.m.

If farming is in your blood, so is the annual trip to Harrisuburg this time of year. Somehow part of your life is missing if you don't attend. So, round up your family and friends and head for the show. And while you're there, stop by our booth, number 274 in the main exhibition hall, and say "Hi." We look forward to your visit.

To Develop Business Side of Farm

Every business has two sides. The technology side and the business side. To be successful today you need to develop both sides. The technology side produces the products that we sell to generate profits. Thus, we must be the best at what we do.

However, the business side must also be equally developed in order to insure success. The business side involves organizational structure, supervising employees, developing and monitoring budgets, controlling costs, marketing products, keeping records and providing benefits to employees and community.

As in any business you must develop each side of the business equally. As we start the new year make sure you are developing both sides of your businesses equally.

To Look At Incremental Returns

One form of expansion is to increase production per cow, acre or output per worker, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent.

However, production may only be pushed so far until you start reaching a point of diminishing returns. As you push for more production, keep comparing incremental costs with incremental gains.

Know your abilities and limitations plus your likes and dislikes. Do you have the ability to sustain high levels of production without experiencing negative setbacks at some future date? Generally speaking, an economical level of milk production appears to be around 19,000 pounds of milk shipped per cow per year. Each 1,000 pounds of milk above this 19,000 pound level will net an about $50 additional profit per cow per year. These figures will vary from farm to farm.

To Make Smart Decisions

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent, reminds us as we attempt to cut costs be careful not to cut profits in the process. Some examples of this are: Failure to maintain vaccination programs. Diseases could sneak in and hurt you latter.

Neglecting heifers and dry cows. You will pay for it dearly latter in the form of ketosis, low milk production, poor conception rates and increased culling. Giving cows less feed or using poor quality feeds. This will trigger problems discusses earlier. The most profitable milk a cow gives - the milk that pays the bills - is the milk she produces above break even level of about 50 to 60 pounds per day (this varies from farm to farm).

When you under feed a cow, the lost milk comes right off the top. That is the most profitable milk and this lost milk may be her only profit. Using a herd bull to save AI costs. If the bull is infertile or has bad genetics or if he spreads infections from cow to cow, you will pay latter. Not to mention your safety.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Some succeed because they are destined to, but most succeed because they are determined to."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE SOLITARY CHRISTIAN
January 11, 1998

Background Scripture:
1 Peter 2:1-10
Devotional Reading:
2 Corinthians 1:3-14

As a pastor, I have frequently been asked: "Is it possible to be a Christian without being a part of the Church?"

My usual answer is that in God's world, I suppose, anything is possible, but it would be extremely unlikely. I have also gone on to say that we may perhaps be Christians without joining a church, but not without being part of the Church.

Unless you live on a desert island, being a Christian alone is a virtual contradiction in terms. To be a Christian means to follow Jesus Christ and, although Jesus sometimes went away to a quiet place to be alone or with only his disciples, still he spent most of his time with people—healing, preaching, and teaching.

In 1 Peter 2 the writer metaphorically likens Jesus to a stone. First, a rejected stone: "Come to him, to that living stone rejected by men but in God's sight chosen and precious." This is an allusion to Psalms 118:22: "The stone which the builders rejected has become the head of the corner." The rejected stone, Peter says, has turned out to be the most important stone of all, Jesus has been rejected by many, but as resurrected Lord he was proven the cornerstone of God's kingdom.

A "LIVING STONE"?

But also, he is a "living stone." This is really a mixed metaphor, because "living" and "stone" seem to be self-contradictory. Stones don't live and if you're alive you are hardly a stone. But Peter knowingly used this mixed metaphor because he wants to convey both the solidity of Christ's place in the kingdom and the certainty that this Christ-the-cornerstone is vibrantly alive. (As I read this passage again today I was fascinated to think that it is Simon, whom Jesus called Peter—"the Rock"—who makes this analogy of Jesus as the "living stone.")

Finally, we come to Peter's words which obliterate the concept of the solitary Christian: "...and like living stones be yourselves built into a spiritual house..." (2.5). The only physical presence Jesus Christ has in the world is the physical presence on those of us who follow him. It is we, the living stones of Christ, who make up the Church in this world. As Annie Johnson Flint wrote:

Christ has no hands
but our hands
To do his work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;

A SPIRITUAL HOUSE

And it must be abundantly clear from these analogies that the Body of Christ can exist only when Christians are connected to each other in some way. We are called, no to be spiritual hermits, but "living stones....built into a spiritual house." The "spiritual house" is the physical representation of Christ in our world. Paul likened Christians to parts of Christ's Body—some representing the head, others the hands, and so on. But all these parts of the Body of Christ must be connected if the Body is to do anything in the world.

Peter proceeds with another mixed metaphor, the "living stones" turning into a holy priesthood to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Christ" (2.5). In verse 9 he expands that corporate concept, saying: "But you are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, God's own people, that you may declare the wonderful deeds of him who called you out of the darkness into marvelous light," No Christians standing alone here.

There is not one word there to encourage the concept of the solitary Christian. We come together and work together because God has a great work for us to take up for Him and it is a work that requires us to work together with other disciples.

There's an old Jewish saying: "Ein Mensch ist kein Mensch" "One man is no man." I think we might apply that same concept to Christian discipleship. A Christian alone is no Christian.

82nd PENNSYLVANIA STATE FARM SHOW
Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Dear Friends of Agriculture:

I extend to you and your family a personal invitation to attend the 1998 Pennsylvania State Farm Show, January 10-15 in Harrisburg. This unique show, the largest indoor agricultural exhibition in the country, is enjoyable and educational for both exhibitors and visitors.

The Farm Show honors the men and women from the Commonwealth's 50,000 farms who provide essential food and fiber to our neighbors around the world. It showcases their achievements and affords them a wonderful opportunity to share their livelihood with consumers on the other end of the food chain.

Thousands of beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep, swine, horses, goats and rabbits are in the limelight of competition and sales throughout the Farm Show week. Three hundred commercial exhibitors feature their newest innovations in farm equipment, services and products. Daily entertainment is featured in the large and small arenas, with rodeos, horse and pony pulling contests, draft horse hitched competition, a folk dance festival and a sheep to shawl contest. A variety of informative demonstrations and events are held throughout the week in the Family Corner.

This year's show will highlight the progress the entire agricultural industry has made during the past year, and will give us a look into the future.

The Farm Show offers the opportunity to recognize and reward the hard work and creativity of our farm families, and to highlight the advances in technology which make our farmers and businesses the most productive in the world. Please make plans to join us during Farm Show Week.

With warm personal regards, I remain

Sincerely,

Samuel E. Hayes, Jr.
Secretary of Agriculture

Cathy Still Looks Excellent In Work Clothes

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) - While Walnut Hill Logic Cathy, the supreme champion last year at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, will not be back in the show ring until later this year, she is as beautiful as ever. A visit to her home at Lynn Neer's farm, Belleville, gives you the opportunity to see an excellent 95 point, six year-old cow, that is as sound in her work clothes as she looks in the show ring.

Owned by Paul Neer, Belleville, Lynn's brother and a professional hoof trimmer and Delmar and Larry Zimmerman of Mifflin and Frank Connelly from State College, Cathy, is, of course, a little pampered. She can navigate the free stall barn, but she is better cared for in her individual stall in a little side barn along the driveway. As the first cow you see when you drive into the farm, she certainly gives a good impression of the dairy herd.

The champion is just 61 inches tall, weighs close to a ton, has an excellent udder, and has made her best record this year of 32,000m 4.9% 1,570f 1,100p 3.5%.

"I don't remember her as a fresh two year-old," Paul said. "But I got acquainted with her as an 89 point three year-old. She sold at Louisville three years ago, and I bought one-half interest for $11,200. I knew she was a good cow, but there was no way I could have known that within 14 months she would be EX95."

After going EX92 right after Paul brought her home, she calved to Stardust. This heifer, Miss DLP Stardust Cameo, is now springing and owned by the Neers and the Zimmermans. The next year Cathy calved with twins. The heifer calf died and the bull calf is in service at a local neighbor's farm.

Over the calving with twins, Cathy went down and almost all hope was gone that she would recover. But after a lot of expert medical care and sleepless nights for her owners, Cathy did recover and is her old independent self again. Both Cathy and Cameo are bred to Carnation Chancelor.

"There are a lot of different opinions on what to look for in a good cow," Paul said. "I'm not a numbers man. Cathy is my kind of cow—balanced, tremendous depth and flatness of rib, excellent udder, open nostrils, long neck—the kind of cow that spells milk.

"Many people equate frailness with dairyness. But I like a cow with strength that also has dairyness. That's a true dairy cow to me. When you see several thousand dairy cows each year as I do, you see the breed is in serious trouble. There is no question a lot of cows are looking far older than they should look. Many times a three year-old shows a lot of milk but has way more udder than she should.

"If a young person is looking to get in the business, he should look for a good cow to build on, and he should look to someone who has been successful with integrity. I can't stress enough the integrity. Cheating on records, indexes and in the show ring is pitiful. A young person needs to look to someone who has the reputation for good cows and is well regarded.

"It's important to me that with Cathy, what you see is what she is. There is nothing done to her at the shows. She is 100 percent cow. We have gotten off trace as a breed. You don't need to have a herd of excellent show cows, but you need to breed cows that last.

"The financial aspect of farming has changed the way things are done today. A cow classified at 86 points that has a calf every year and makes a good record is the best kind of cow to have," Paul said.

As for showing at the Farm Show, Paul says there are positives and negatives. The kind of publicity you get here is incredible, but the time of year, in the middle of winter, makes it a hard show to handle the animals. And the large number of people who come through makes it hard also. But on the other hand, bringing the farm to the city is good for education.

So, you will not be able to see Cathy in January this year, unless you drive to her home in Belleville. But if everything goes right, you may be able to see her at Shippensburg later this year and on through the fall shows. But wherever you see Cathy, you will see a beautiful cow.

Use the wrong insecticide and your corn is the gazelle.

In the midst of a feeding frenzy is when the questions come. Why on earth am I seeing so many pests? Wasn't my insecticide strong enough? Or was it too strong early, losing its bite later? What was I thinking? And so on. Only COUNTER® CR® systemic insecticide-nematicide gives you answers. It's controlled-release. It lasts longer. So nothing rips into your yield.

'Pig Herder' Dog Helps Prepare Beams For Farm Show

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELVERSON (Chester Co.) — Max can be unruly sometimes. If you drop your pocketbook, he'll retrieve it and, most likely, run away.

Max can be unpredictable. The 9-month-old Labrador Retriever is the infamous "pig herder" on the swine farm owned by Bill and Robin Beam, Elverson. The yellow Lab can keep the Farm Show hogs in line while they're walked, or he can simply get in their face and make them bolt every-which-way.

Max can be downright cunning. "If we'd go duck hunting, he'd eat the ducks," said Bill's 12-year-old son, Matthew, who watches as the infamous "pig herder" works on the two York crossbreds being walked in preparation for Farm Show.

Max has enemies, too. He can't stand cats, said Matthew's brother, Shawn, 9. "He'll go after them, and they'll scratch back," he said.

But Max is a lot of fun and great help to the Beam family.

He'll split the hogs on their walk in the middle. Max is "trying to think he's helping," said Bill Beam. "He thinks he's helping. He's just that way."

Have we forgotten something? Oh, they took Max fishing one day and he nabbed a bluegill.

"I don't know what it is about Max," said Bill. "Call it talent, but it's something."

Although the yellow Lab is "still a puppy, he's just a big puppy," Bill said, the family has taken him into their own. Even Dylan, at 3 years old and the youngest of the brothers, tries to play with him. "But Max just tackles him," said Matthew. "Max is just too big."

Max stays with Matthew and Shawn Beam, both of whom plan to make great strides at their first Farm Show.

Matthew, 12, is in the sixth grade at Conestoga Christian School in Morgantown. Brother Shawn, 9, is in the third grade at the school.

Their father, Bill, noted that Matthew placed at the annual Southeast 4-H Market Hog Derby held at the Lebanon Fairgrounds last summer. In August, both boys participated at the Chester County 4-H Roundup and Sale.

Bill noted that the "Lancaster and Lebanon guys offer tough competition," he said, so it will take some time for his sons to learn how to show. Matthew and Shawn both do a lot of work on the farm, helping with feeding, bedding, and caring for the hogs.

Matthew helps feed the 40 head of beef cattle in the barn.

The farm is also home to some show hogs by Kirk Ewing, Owen J. Roberts FFA member. Ewing works on the farm cleaning pens, bedding, and feeding.

Matthew and Shawn Beam are taking two York/Hampshire crossbred hogs, with genetics obtained by their cousin Nelson Beam, Elverson, and uncle Brian Beam of Lebanon to the Farm Show.

Before that, however, the Chester County 4-H Swine Club members are getting a lot of work out of Max.

Their dog helps herd the hogs "if the weather is decent," according to Bill Beam.

They watch for good weather because one day it was icy. They took out some hogs for a show, and one hog got hurt when it slipped, pulling a muscle. Each day, weather permitting, the hogs are walked about a mile down the long, paved path to the farm.

They also walk them on the weekends "so they don't get fat," said Matthew.

Both don't have names for their hogs. They are simply referred to by a computer inventory tag number. "I think mine is number 196 or 194 or something," said Matthew.

They don't name them simply because, even though the boys sometimes get attached emotionally to their hogs, "they don't get real attached," said Bill Beam.

The hog show is scheduled in the Small Arena of the Farm Show Complex on Tuesday, Jan. 13, beginning at 8:30 a.m. Judge for the show is Dr. Lauren L. Christian, Ames, Iowa. Arrival time for pigs is Sunday, Jan. 11 between 4 p.m. and the next day, 10 a.m., Monday, Jan. 12. Market swine will be weighed in beginning at 8:30 a.m. on Monday, Jan. 12.

Bill noted that, with some of the almost a dozen hogs kept for show in the pen, some are the result of AI work being done by Brian Beam, his brother.

Matthew works on feeding and bedding the hogs. He also helps with the beef cattle, moving them to different pastures in the summertime.

Matthew, while he enjoys swine projects, wants to raise cattle for showing someday. "You can make a lot of money with them," he said.

Shawn helps load the hog self-feeder. Both help with bedding the hog pens.

Bill cares for about 1,100 acres of land near the 135-acre home farm in Elverson. Titus Beam, Bill's father, has been a long-time 4-H leader.

Bill used to maintain a swine finishing house, but opted out of the operation years ago because of the unpredictable prices.

Now, he cares for about 40 head of finishing beef, taking 25 cows to a grazing system that encompasses about 35 acres on the farm.

Bill remembers what it was like to show at the county fairs.

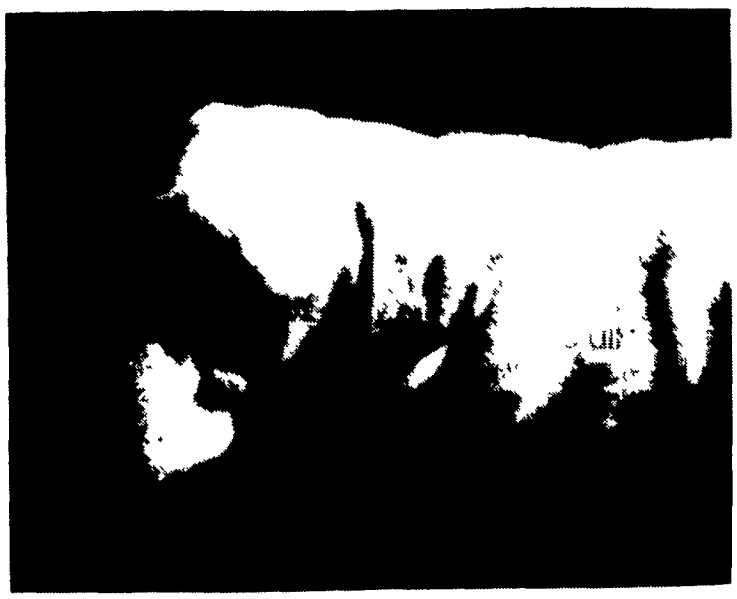
He took out a newspaper clipping from Sept. 6, 1972 — he was 12 years old, the same age as his son, Matthew.

The clipping was from The Herald of Honey Brook. He was showing hogs at the Chester-Delaware County 4-H Hog Show at the Vintage Sales Barn. Bill was pictured with Doug Beam, his brother, 11 years old at the time. In the photo, standing with them was David Kantner, Bucks County assistant agent.

By the way — Max, the Beam's all-purpose dog, wasn't in the picture.

But if you asked Matthew and Shawn, he'd sure like to be.

Matthew Beam, front, works on feeding and bedding the hogs. He also helps with the beef cattle, moving them to different pastures in the summertime. Shawn, in back, helps his brother with bedding.



Max the "pig herder" in a contemplative moment.

Farm Show Expands Family Living And Learning Center

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – The Pennsylvania Farm Show's Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center, formerly the Family Corner, has expanded with two stages featuring simultaneous educational and entertainment presentations, according to Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr.

"The additional stage allows for more Pennsylvania educators and craftspeople to promote their agriculture-related activities, such as weaving and quilt making, as well as agriculture products, such as emu and wine," Hayes said.

Family Living and Agricultural Learning demonstrations will be held Monday through Thursday on the Upper level of the Northeast Building. Demonstrations include quilting, spinning and weaving, cooking, lace making, branch carving, old-fashioned toys and games for children, floral design, and corn husk art.

Monday's theme, Chef Day, pays tribute to the 296, 984 men and women from Pennsylvania's 19,701 restaurants and food service operations. Students from various schools will prepare foods using Pennsylvania products such as mushrooms, pork, trout, eggs and emu.

A mini-course on beekeeping will be presented by active members of the Capital Area Beekeepers Association. All aspects of beekeeping will be discussed in their presentation at 6 p.m. Monday.

Tuesday's theme highlights the Pennsylvania floral industry. Floriculture is a half-billion-dollar industry in Pennsylvania. Stage presentations include: how to select and care for quality floral products; floral designs; and how to care for house plants.

Wednesday is a salute to Pennsylvania's youth—the future of Pennsylvania agriculture. As a vital component of today's society, youth organizations such as 4-H and FFA play an important role in creating the future by providing positive opportunities for young people. There will be a variety of FFA and 4-H demonstrations, an ice cream-making contest, and the Apple Core Band, back by popular demand for two performances.

Activities in the Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center conclude on Thursday with the final demonstration by Shaver's Creek Environmental Center, Old Time Country Folk and Bluegrass Music by Jay Smar, and the third annual Micro-Pong Tournament.

The Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center also features commercial exhibitors, farm and home displays, and apple pie and chocolate cake winners. It is just one acre of the 16 acres under one roof at the 82nd Pennsylvania Farm Show.

The Farm Show is free and open to the public. The hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 10, through Wednesday, Jan. 14. On Thursday, Jan. 15, the show closes at 4 p.m. Parking is available at the 60-acre complex for $5 per vehicle. There are handicap accessible entrances to the building along the north and south entrances and in front of the large arena.

Pair Of Cousins Sweep Lancaster Tobacco Show

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — There were two cousins, you see . . . .

No, not the two that formed the garage, pasta place, minimall, or shoe store.

We're talking about the two cousins that formed a unique tobacco growing championship.

They're second cousins, actually, but Jessica Neff and Andy Burkholder share more than a family tradition of growing the county's premier cash crop. They also shared grand champion honors Tuesday afternoon at the Lancaster County Tobacco Show at the Farm and Home Center.

By telephone, Jessica told Lancaster Farming that her father, Gary Neff, is cousin to Andy Burkholder's mother, Mary.

Jessica, 20, won grand champion Pennsylvania-grown smoking tobacco with her 16-leaf hand from Class 6, tops. Jessica, daughter of Gary and Dianne Neff, Millersville, is a 1996 graduate of Penn Manor High School. She is a sophomore at Penn State studying ag business.

Her cousin Andy Burkholder, 17, won grand champion Pennsylvania Type 41 tobacco from the Class1Y, wrappers. Andy, son of Tina and Sherman Burkholder, Millersville, is in the 11th grade at Penn Manor.

Like cousin Jessica, Andy is enrolled in FFA. Jessica served as chapter secretary. Andy works at a wholesale flower company in Washington Boro.

Both work as seasonal farm hands on the 14-acre Neff Brothers farm in Manor Township, Jessica noted. Jessica and Andy have helped in all stages of tobacco production, from planting the transplants grown at the farm to hoeing, cutting, stripping, and "sharing information about tobacco," she said. Jessica indicated the Neff Brothers have been growing tobacco for 50 years.

Jessica said this year, being dry, provided a "better chance of getting a more clean leaf," with fewer holes. It was a "pretty good year for growing," she said. They follow a planned insecticide program to control aphids and "fortunately had no problems with blue mold."

This was Andy Burkholder's first champion. Jessica has received champion at the show before.

In choosing a potentially winning hand of tobacco leaves, Andy said, "We look for thickness and color and size." Jessica said her father, Gary, helped her choose some good leaves because of his tobacco growing knowledge.

Judges for the Lancaster County Tobacco Show were Geoffrey H. Ranck, Domestic Tobacco Company, and Raymond Rinehart, leaf purchaser with Lancaster Leaf.

Ranck said the winners were selected because of a "gut grab" type of feeling. "One smelled the most, had the light on it," he said.

The overall appeal brought it to their attention. The judges look for the uniformity of leaf, stretch, texture, and overall color. Any kinds of holes, blemishes, or spotting can work against a final grade.

For the smoking tobacco, Ranck noted that you really should take the leaves being judged and "set them on fire" to see how they burn, he said. Size is not always the determining factor, as long as it is long enough — it doesn't have to be the biggest leaf. But burning the leaf is one way to determine exactly the quality of the tobacco.

The county tobacco show serves as a "prelude" to the state show, scheduled at the Farm Show Complex tomorrow on the second floor of the Northeast building. Judging begins at 9 a.m. Show judge is John Yocum, manager of the Penn State Southeast Extension Research Center in Landisville.

At the show on Tuesday, there were a total of 39 exhibitors and 107 exhibits. Following is a list of Lancaster County Tobacco Show results.

Tobacco Growers Wait While Auction Season Stalls Again

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — Once again, as millions of dollars worth of tobacco waits in the warehouse, the auction has been put on further standby.

The auction season stalled again on Monday as growers await word on activity by the major processors to give buyers the go-ahead to bid.

It was reported in the local newspapers on Tuesday that since Dec. 8, when the auction season was set to open, no buyers bid at the auction and no buyers are making offers on the farm.

"We told farmers not to panic," said Eric Probst of Paradise Auction, where 600,000 pounds wait for buyers to bid. "It seems to me that everybody is on hold."

The only tobacco moving are bales under contract for $1.60 per pound. The contracts were written last winter, and the tobacco is due next week.

Buyers were anticipating bidding to $1.80 per pound, but some buyers wanted only the top leaves.

One buyer, Geoffrey Ranck with Domestic Tobacco, said his company purchases only the top end for cigars, the binders and wrappers and long filler, using strictly Pa. 41 type. Ranck said he doesn't deal with Maryland 609 — the tobacco waiting for sale at the Paradise warehouse.

But while Ranck said he can't answer about the 609 tobacco at the warehouse, he suspects that the major processors are waiting on world conditions to improve and world demand to dictate what to do.

According to Clark Stauffer, Ephrata, a buyer for Golden Leaf, demand has been light for the large amounts of lighter-type tobacco waiting at the auction. Demand is up for the darker tips and bottom stalks of the plant.

Golden Leaf, based in Keysville, Va., purchases only contracted product in this region. That tobacco was contracted last December and delivery is scheduled now to the 14th of the month.

As for the 600,000 pounds remaining in the warehouse, Stauffer said it is important that the tobacco is stripped dry and in good condition to prevent spoilage. Tobacco stripped dry and in good condition, as long as the weather remains cool, will hold for some time.

Tobacco stripped wet can start getting "warm" and begin to produce a discernable odor, according to Stauffer. Spoilage can create real problems when it comes time to market it.

A Paradise Auction spokesperson noted that they will try to get the season started on Monday, Jan. 12.

Machinery Has Changed From Small To Big To Small Again In This Man's Farm Show Memory

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CHALFONT (Bucks Co.) — "Over the years, the machinery got bigger and bigger. Now it's gone the other way."

Only recently did Joseph Nowakowski, who's attended farm shows for 43 years in a row since 1955, comment about the changing look of Pennsylvania agriculture's big event.

Nowakowski said that, when he attended Farm Show as a child, he remembers the equipment being displayed as small, made for the small farmer. In the years since, the exhibition hall has grown with the size of the tractors and implements.

Now the tide has changed, and the focus has "gone the other way," he noted, "back to the small equipment and the small farmer," in many cases the farmer working part time.

The memories of the early days of attending Farm Show are strong in Joe Nowakowski's mind. He remembers, as a vo-ag student and Central Bucks FFA member in high school, that he helped set up the FFA project displays.

The memories of the early days of attending Farm Show are strong in Nowakowski's mind. He remembers, as a vo-ag student and Central Bucks FFA member in high school, that he helped set up the FFA project displays.

But the Chalfont farmer recalls a great deal of what he loved about the show that's still true today: the livestock shows, the exhibits, and the overall flavor of focusing on Pennsylvania agriculture.

His favorite aspect of Farm Show has always been the machinery. The prices often were too exorbitant. So he'd simply wait for 10 years and purchase the equipment he saw at the Farm Show through auction or private sales, he noted.

Nowakowski grew up on a dairy farm in Chalfont. Now he maintains about 31 acres on the home farm and manages another 200 acres of leased ground. He cares for a herd of beef heifers and grows produce for a farm stand.

Nowakowski was graduated from Central Bucks High School in 1958. He enrolled at Delaware Valley College and was graduated in 1963 with a degree in dairy husbandry.

Since graduating from Del Val, he has driven school bus every year.

Nowakowski recalls his "worst" Farm Show weather experience.

About 22 years ago, he remembers looking out the window from the Farm Show and it looked "all gray" outside, he said. When they decided to leave, snow started to fall. It took them 4-5 hours to drive the normal 1½ hour distance home to their farm in Chalfont.

Nowakowski is married to JoAnne. They have a daughter, Lynn, who is involved in the dried flower business with a degree in horticulture from Del Val.

One improvement in the Farm Show Complex itself that is satisfactory to Nowakowski is the building's "no smoking" policy, which he said has been helpful. He appreciates the amount of innovation in the size of the show, the buildings, and the events that have begun in the time since he started attending Farm Show 43 years ago.

Despite a bout with colon cancer a few years ago, in which he spend seven weeks in the hospital in the summer, Nowakowski still recovered in time to attend the Farm Show and keep the streak alive.

One improvement the Farm Show made was to switch the opening Day from Sunday to Saturday, giving families the weekend to enjoy the show. He said he probably will attend the show Saturday.

"I enjoy all the parts of the Farm Show," he said. "I wouldn't want to take anything away from it, and nothing to add to it. I've enjoyed myself better last year at the show than in many of the previous years."

Optimistic Future for Pennsylvania Dairy Industry

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) – Increased consumption plus emerging technologies plus increased exports plus product innovation equal an optimistic future for Pennsylvania dairymen. The clear message at the Pennsylvania Dairy Futures Conference held in December in State College was that there is tremendous opportunity for the dairy industry, and Pennsylvania can remain a key player in the picture.

Monte Hemenover, director of industry affairs for Protiva, brought the clearest message of unlimited potential, and emphasized the need to keep milk production in the northeast to provide for the demand throughout the eastern United States.

Hemenover challenged the farmers present to use their professional service providers (bankers, nutritionists, veterinarians, feed dealers) as a "board of directors," giving them the responsibility to help in meeting the goals of the farm. He encouraged entering into contracts to ensure delivery of service.

With cheese driving the price of milk, Hemenover noted that cheese consumption doubled in the last 20 years, with 68 percent of that consumed away from home. A modest increase in per capita consumption would reap enormous gains in demand for milk to fill that consumption.

He stressed that the industry needs to provide consumers with what they want, adapting products to meet demands, and packaging them creatively to compete.

Dr. John Lord, professor and chairman of the food marketing department of Saint Joseph's University, Philadelphia, echoed the theme of providing innovative products. He noted that dairy products have many features which should be exploited to meet consumers' demands for healthy, flavorful products. Its calcium content is a natural for the health conscious, but doing seasonal flavorings creates demand. He noted some of the emerging beverages which offer attractive flavors and convenient containers. Lord said that "value-added" and "attention to consumer preferences" will be the keys to success for the dairy industry

Bill Eby, editor of the Kiplinger Agriculture Letter, emphasized the importance of the shrinking world in providing opportunities for the dairy industry. "We must think in global terms," he said, adding that the trend to fewer farms but larger herds will continue. "The surviving producers will be better operations." He noted that the largest 20 co-ops market 60 percent of all the milk sold in the U.S., and said that the newly proposed Dairy Farmers of America will market 25 percent of the nation's milk. He added that the larger co-ops will become more diversified.

Dr. Robert Yonkers, dairy economist for Penn State, said, "We do have a vibrant dairy industry," citing Pennsylvania's continuing dairy producing strength relative to the other traditional northeast and upper midwest states. he noted the large differences in production per cow from farm to farm, and challenged dairymen to apply current production technology and increase their production per cow.

Jonas Kauffman, Pennsylva-nia Farm Credit, noted that there is no one way to operate a profitable dairy business. "Different management styles can be successful, but managers should be good at what they do. Find your way, get good at it, and manage like crazy." He encouraged producers to find the right mix of capital and labor, and to strike a balance between milk production per cow and cost of production. He emphasized that it is important in controlling costs to respond to the three biggest expenses.

John Ligo, dairyman from Mercer County, and Dan Ulmer, dairyman from Centre County, both shared personal experiences. Ulmer stressed his understanding of the need to find quality family time while managing the operation effectively. Ligo noted the importance of dealing with people who want to provide excellent service along with the product. Both of these successful Pennsylvania dairymen shared their optimism for the future of the Pennsylvania dairy industry.

Dairyman Ligo captured the positive outlook for the industry in his "Thirteen reasons why dairy is good in Pennsylvania:"

1. Milk prices are higher now than they were in 1995 and 1996. And they are rising!
2. Milk production per cow is up in Pennsylvania over the last year.
3. Feed is relatively inexpensive and currently relatively available.
4. Infrastructure and University support are still very good in Pennsylvania.
5. There are new mechanisms available for hedging prices (BFP futures and cooperative contracts.)
6. Genetics are the best ever offered - and they will be better in six months.
7. Industry enjoys consumer goodwill and positive public image.
8. There is more dairy product advertising in place than there has ever been and it is more effective than it has ever been.
9. There are exciting new products and new packaging.
10. New fractioning processes for milk will provide specific new products for food and industrial uses.
11. Foreign demand will soon outstrip what other dairy export countries can supply.
12. There is less government regulation now.
13. It is significant that the market price of U.S. cheese is finally on a par with the world price.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Futures Conference was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stockholders in conjunction with Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. For additional information concerning the conference of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, contact N. Alan Bair at 777 West Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057 or by calling 717-948-6328.

Number Of Farms Unchanged In State

There were 50,000 farms in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as of June 1, 1997, with 7.7 million acres. The good news is that this is the same as last year. The average farm size was also unchanged at 154 acres.

In the 1997 data, there were 24,000 farms with 1.8 million acres of land producing $1,000 up to $10,000 in gross sales annually. For sales between $10,000 and $100,000 there were 17,700 farms with 3 million acres of land. And there were only 8,300 farms with 2.9 million acres of land that produced gross sales over $100,000 annually.

On the national scene, the number of farms in 1997 is estimated at 2.06 million and this number is less than one percent lower than the 1996 figure. Across the country, we have 968 million acres in farmland, also relatively unchanged. Average farm size at the national level is 470 acres.

Determination Pays Off For Farm Show Family

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

PETERSBURG (Huntingdon Co.) – The first years that John A. Foster, Jr., of Huntingdon County showed Holsteins in 4-H, he stood dead last in the class. He decided to buy a good heifer and still ended up last.

"I was determined to get good cattle," Foster said.

Foster's determination during a lifetime of dairying has paid off in more ways than one.

He earned second place in the owner/breeder class at Madison, had Michigan State University call him for semen from his "Top Gun" bull, has sold several bulls for breeding purposes; has a bull in a proving program, has earned grand champion at the Farm Show several times; and has received innumerable premier breeder and premier exhibitor awards, including several from the Farm Show.

Although Foster and his wife Alice like to win, they know good "sportsmanship" both in and out of the ring is most important along with fellowship with friends and breeders.

"I like to win," he said, "But I'd rather stand second and have the first-place winner as a friend. But I believe I wouldn't have gotten a call from Michigan State, for example, if I wouldn't have been out there showing or if I'd had a bad reputation."

The fourth generation to farm Globe-Run Farms near Petersburg, John and Alice rent the 500-acre farm from his father. They grow 200 acres of corn, 150 acres of corn, 150 acres of alfalfa, 50 acres of grass hay, and 50 acres of soybeans. The Foster's milk 130 Holsteins in a flat barn parlor with automatic takeoffs. They employ two full-time hired men. John's father, after several bouts with cancer, still comes to help with the field-work.

"We thank the Lord for John's father still being able to be here," Alice said.

"In the summer of 1981,: John said, "we had cattle at shows for eight straight weeks. That's the year we had grand champion at the Central Pennsylvania Championship with Globe-Run Elevation Tammy (Ex-90-3E). She had been away from the farm for three weeks in a row and brought home four grand champions, which helped her win the All Pennsylvania 4-year-old award that year."

Although they've cut down the number of shows they exhibit in each year, their string of award-winning cows has continued.

"We won a genetic award at the Central National in Madison, Wisconsin, with Globe-Run Enhancer Kitty. She scored high for classification, milk production, placing in class and genetic evaluation. Our Globe-Run Top Gun Oslo (Ex-92), a granddaughter of one of our top cows, Darlene, was second owned and bred in her class at Madison another year."

The Foster's have not missed a Farm Show in 25 years. In fact, their 12 year-old daughter Charrann has attended 13 Farm Shows! In 1985, she was only one week old. In the 1997 Farm Show, Charann earned a champion showman award. The family took grand champion in 1991 with home-bred Globe-Run G-Word Trisha (Ex-91). Trisha went on to win champion at several other shows. Trisha was also shown by their older daughter Anissa Musser.

In 1990, John's oldest son, John Foster, III, better known as Andy, showed at the state junior show and won junior champion in both the 4-H show with Glove-Run Starbuck Beverly (Ex-90) and junior champion in the FFA competition with Globe-Run Tempo Bambi (Ex-90). Andy is a Taurus representative. When not on the road for Taurus, Andy finds time to help at home on the farm. He continues to fit all of the animals for show.

This year at the Farm Show, the Foster's, including 9-year-old Samantha, will show six animals from the farm, including an aged cow named Globe-Run Jethro Violet (Ex-91-2E).

Well-known 14-year-old Globe-Run Sexy Darlene (Ex-93-4E) will not be making her traditional trip to the Farm Show this year. In the past, she has won numerous awards, including grand, reserve, and junior champion several times; honorable mention All American Senior Yearling, and All Pennsylvania and Junior All Pennsylvania several times for both Andy and Charann.

In fact, this year she won the 1997 Reserve Junior All Pennsylvania 125,000 Award. Her accomplishments continue outside the show ring, too. She has produced quite a few offspring, seven sons (five used on the farm), nine daughters, 21 granddaughters, 10 great-granddaughters, plus more on the way. Darlene's milk record includes 8-01 365 days 35,981M 4.1% 1492F 3.2% 1149P. Her lifetime record is nearing 200,000 pound of milk.

Although Foster uses artificial insemination, he likes home-bred bulls. He has five bulls at neighboring farms. One neighbor, Marvin J. Zook, has used well over 15 Glove-Run bulls for his herd.

"With bulls here on the farm, I know what I have and who can be mated to whom. Our bull Globe-Run Aerostar Mega is now being sampled. We sold Mega's full sister to Canada. Someone saw her at the Farm Show and wanted both the mother and daughter.

"The goal here is to financially keep the farm going," Foster said, "Without registered cows, without shows or without sales, we wouldn't have cattle. The bulk tank is not enough, nor can we always justify driving to shows. But when someone makes a nice offer for one of our cows, it's worth it. It makes you feel like you have accomplished something."

Besides winning and marketing, there are two other very good reasons why John and Alice continue showing their daughters Samantha and Charann.

"We try to teach the girls to be honest. Showing also teachers them to be gracious winners and how to congratulate the ones that beat you. Deal honestly, do the best job possible, and God willing, it'll pay big dividends in the end."

Samantha Foster will show Globe-Run Mason Bett Boots, her junior calf, at the 1998 Farm Show.

Looking At Potatoes? Youth Prepare For Exciting Contest

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) – Potatoes stacked on small paper plates sit at one end of the room. A blackboard is at the other end.

They are both tools a group of 15 Adams County 4-H'ers are using as they prepare to enter the competition that will eventually lead some of them to the Pennsylvania State Farm Show in Harrisburg.

At the head of the class in the Penn State Extension Office classroom near Gettysburg is Jerry Tyson, a retired Adams County extension agent, who is providing information the youths will need if they are to take part in the innocuous, and seldom publicized, potato judging.

What can be that exciting about looking at potatoes?

For these youths it's the competition to possibly reach the goal of a blue ribbon for their knowledge about potatoes. They want to be on one of two teams who will represent their county at the prestigious, and perennial, state Farm Show.

Competing for a spot on one of the teams is Kristi Cunningham, 15, Arendtsville. It's her second year and she returned because "it was fun, so I thought I'd give it a try again," she said.

Last year, her first year in potato judging, started when she heard there was a need for team members. As a member of Team B, she said, "I learned that there is more to potatoes" than most people think.

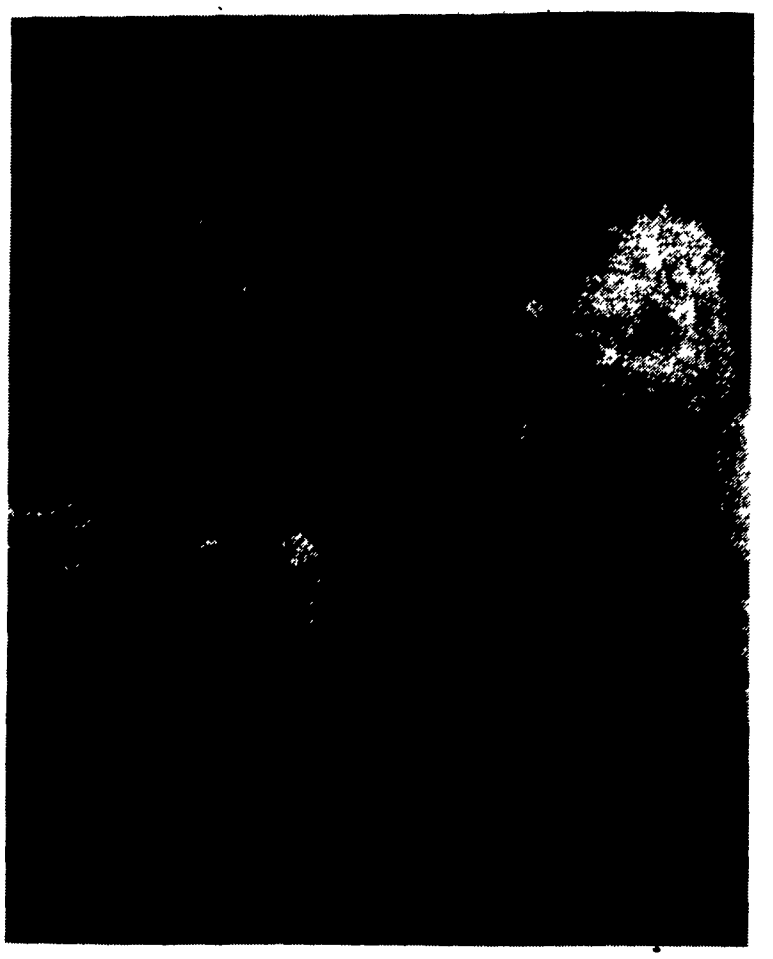
The sophomore at Biglerville High School said in competition she will be looking for "cracks, flakes, and spokes" on the potatoes that may in some way make them less than perfect.

"It could happen in growing or shipping," she said. It's up to the competition to tell the judges about the potato and that takes practice, which will happen over the next month as the youths compete for a spot on one of the teams.

As a representative to the Adams County 4-H Senate and a member of the Upper Adams 4-H Program, she is aiming this year for Team A and hopes last year's experience will provide what she needs to reach that goal.

Visitors to the Farm Show will also be able to see Kristi doing her 4-H presentation. She explained that earlier this year she won a first place during an Adams County presentation on how to make a bird house out of cardboard and will be taking that project along to Harrisburg, too.

Laura Burdette of Biglerville takes notes on how to be the best potato judge in an effort to make one of two 4-H teams that will represent Adams County at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show.



Jerry Tyson, retired Adams County extension agent, takes a group of 4-H members through their paces as they compete for a place on one of two teams that will take part in potato judging at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show

Budding potato judges, left, Jessie Leister and Jenelle Keller, both of Gettysburg, and Kristi Cunningham of Arendtsville, listen intently during a recent meeting of a group of Adams County 4-H members competing for membership on two teams that will represent the county at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Commodity Outlook Conference Set

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) – Will 1998 be a good year for you? How will it be different from last year? What can producers do to meet the challenges the future holds?

You can learn the answers to all these questions by attending the Commodity Outlook Conference sponsored by Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB). The PFB conference will be held at two locations, on Wednesday, Jan. 28 at the Holiday Inn, Grantville, PA and again on Thursday, Jan. 29 at the Best Western University Inn, Indiana, PA.

"We can predict with confidence that 1998 will bring many changes to the agricultural industry," said PFB president Guy Donaldson. "For us to develop a positive vision and response to these changes, we need to understand the challenges that lie ahead."

Each Commodity Outlook Conference will begin with registration at 9:30 a.m. and will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with lunch included. A registration fee of $5 per person will be charged.

All farmers or anyone interested in what the future holds for agriculture is invited to attend.

"As we look forward to the coming year in production agriculture, there is uncertainty as to what to expect, no matter what commodity you may be producing," said Donaldson. "How will you be affected by government rules and regulations, industry mergers and consolidation, new technology, changes in consumer demand, environmental and food safety concerns, world markets and trade, marketing trends or other issues. These are questions that will be addressed at the Commodity Outlook Conference."

The featured speaker at the conference will be Dr. Luther Tweeten, Professor of Agricultural Marketing, Policy and Trade at Ohio State Unviersity. Professor Tweeten will lead off the conference with a two-hour session on the major issues transforming the entire agricultural industry. During separate sessions in the afternoon, commodity experts from the American Farm Bureau Federation will discuss the outlooks for dairy, livestock, poultry and crop producers.

"The goal of our Commodity Outlook Conference is to develop a positive vision for each commodity area and to identify issues and direction that Farm Bureau can actively help with," Donaldson said. "I strongly urge all interested farmers to attend the conference in their area."

The deadline for conference registration is Jan. 23. To register, send a check for $5 per person attending, payable to "Pennsylvania Farm Bureau", to: Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Member Relations Division, P.O. Box 8736, Camp Hill, PA 17001-8736.

No Agricultural Event Compares To Farm Show

exporting opportunities, alternative production opportunities, and to meet a variety of people who are the potential consumers of Pennsylvania products.

In this era of renewed government support for small business, and especially new types of agricultural enterprise, the Farm Show can afford the producer — whose lifestyle may necessarily restrict contact with the general public — the ability to better understand the wants and desires of the consuming public. That can stimulate ideas for doing something different on the farm that can add to farm income.

And of course, as it always has, the Farm Show affords an opportunity for farmer-to-farmer and farm family socializing, to learn about each other's businesses and concerns, and to learn about different species, the ideal type and production techniques.

With 16 acres under roof, the state's Farm Show Complex at Maclay and Cameron streets in Harrisburg provides a year-round venue for a variety of shows and exhibitions, though the primary purpose for the state building the complex was to house the once-a-year state Farm Show.

Grumbine (whose first year as director was challenged by a blizzard that resulted in Gov. Tom Ridge shutting down all highways to public traffic, allowing only emergency vehicles) said that, with good weather, he expects about 400,000 visitors to the facility.

Part of that contingent is to be comprised of about 240 international visitors who had indicated they would be attending the International Celebration 1998 trade show, scheduled to be held today from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Harrisburg Hilton and Towers, on 2nd Street in Harrisburg.

Leo Dunn, director of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Bureau of Market Development, said there were 63 booths to be set up in the Ball Room of the Hilton.

He said that the booths were to be set up in aisles, eight-booths deep, from left to right across the room, like the aisles of a shopping market.

From the left, in the first wall row are to be Pennsylvania agricultural and exporting service providers, including government agencies, the Port of Philadelphia, freight forwarding businesses and consultants.

The second aisle is a double row of booths facing each other. Companies occupying those spaces include livestock and livestock equipment dealers. The next double row is to be booths of food and processed food businesses, such as Moyer Packing Inc. (meat processor), Cloister Spring Water, Sauders Eggs, etc.

The third double row is to be half more food, and half hardwoods businesses.

The far single aisle has been taken by processed foods companies and another livestock company.

Dunn said that the international guests who have indicated they will attend the trade show, and the evening's Farm Show dinner (about 7 p.m. in the Hilton Ballroom), represent about 30 nations.

About of an anticipated 238 visitors, only six are dignitaries, the rest are buyers.

He said of the notices of intent to attend included a contigent of about 25 from the People's Republic of China, one from the Czechoslovakian Republic, Ecuador, seven from Egypt, three from Astonia, seven from Ghana, two from Guatemala, one from Guinea, one from China/Hong Kong, four from India, two from Indonesia, 38 from Italy (buyers looking fro equipment who are to tour the New Holland plant after the trade show), one from Japan, two from Kazakhstan, one from Latvia, one from Madagascar, 18 from Mexico, two from Morocco, 1 from Nepal, one from the Netherland Antilles, two from New Zealand, tentatively 48 from Nigeria, one from Pakistan, five from the Phillipines, three from Poland, about 12 from Russia, two from Tiawan, one from Uganda, eight from the Ukraine, one from Uzbekistan, and the ambassador from Mongolia.

Though the amount of trade directly tied to PDA working with industry to promote Pennsylvania agribusiness in the previous two international events cannot be nailed down to a specific amount, Lancaster Farming has reported business deals worth many millions.

Such agressive promotion of Pennsylvania products has been taken up by Gov. Ridge and Secretary Hayes as an essential element in the strategy to rebuild and reinforce the economic infrastructure of the state.

Just weeks ago, Gov. Ridge and Secretary Hayes traveled to several Pacific Rim nations to meet with officials to boost export opportunities for Pennsylvania products and commodities.

While the economies of the those nations, such as the Republic of Korea, have recently experienced some turmoil, the trip was used to establish and further existing relationships.

According to many consultants and those with experience in global marketing, person-to-person relationships and the building of trust are essential to breaking ground in successful international trade.

Part of Secretary Hayes' work plan for the state agriculture department is to work with businesses to identify barriers to trade, and then to forward those concerns directly to our United States representatives to the World Trade Organization.

Kenneth Raney, executive director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association (PHA), said this week that the International Celebration and efforts by the PDA are essential to promoting Pennsylvania.

The PHA has been a pioneer in Pennsylvania and in the Northeast for exporting dairy cattle. It has continued to work to market Pennsylvania Holsteins worldwide, and participation in the International Celebration is becoming one of its most important avenues for establishing a global presence.

"I think (the International Celebration trade show) is really important, and I compliment the (PDA) for brining in potential buyers and people interested in Pennsylvania agriculture," Raney said.

"The way it's set up now, it's excellent. It's set up with buyers, more than the dignitaries. As far as that, they (the PDA) is doing an excellent job for us, member services organizations, and businesses."

The PHA has exported a lot of Pennsylvania Holstein cattle to about 50 counties over the years. Raney said the International event is seen as a way to meet and possibly do business with people whom he has not yet met.

"It takes time to develop a business relationship. We've talked to potential buyers (at the past two international trade shows), but have not made sales, but I'm assuming those same people will be back again this year.

"You need to be there to let the rest of the world know what is available and what you have to offer," Raney said.

Others at the Farm Show, other than the anticipated 400,000 visitors, include representatives from 325 agriculturally related companies displaying their products and services out of commercial exhibits. A list of the companies and their locations in the complex is included in this issue.

And though poultry exhibits were banned this year as a precautionary measure — due to outbreaks of a non-pathogenic, or non-deadly, strain of avian influenza — there are more than 9,000 entries in 30 catagories of competitions.

There are record premiums of $247,138 and they will be paid out to exhibitors including those showing 525 beef cattle, 520 dairy cattle, 225 dairy goats, 136 horses, 568 rabbits, 823 sheep, 619 swine, and 136 draft horses.

Not inlcuding meat rabbits, there are to be a total of 3,483 animals exhibited during the week.

Competitions include some of the perennial crowd pleasers, such as the folk dance festival and contest; the Pennsylvania High School Rodeo Association's championship rodeo in the Large Arena; the apple pie contest; the Scooper Bowl, a celebrity ice cream eating contest; the FFA window exhibits, and, of course, the opening ceremonies featuring Gov. Ridge's welcome.

For the second consecutive year, Pennsylvania State Police Commissioner Paul Evanko is to lead the reactivated State Police Equestrian Drill Team. Evanko is a horse enthusiast who lead the effort to restore the drill team after its 20-year hiatus.

The state FFA Convention again is to be held in conjunction with the Farm Show, and will feature the presentation of Keystone Farmer Degrees, as well as the selection of the top FFA individuals in the state.

Those curious about Christmas trees can walk through a miniature forest of different varieties judged for appearance and shape.

Those unfamiliar with agricultural judging should note that all species are compared against an abstract "ideal" of perfection for that species.

While breeders can select for genetics that can provide a solid foundation for achieving the ideal, it takes a good understanding of creating the proper environment for growth to make those genetics express themselves to the fullest.

In addition to all the traditional production and historic agricultural animal and plant species showcased in the Farm Show's competitions, the show also presents exhibits of judged production skills — such as home food preservation by canning and drying, cooking skills and clothes-making.

But not only are the judged exhibits on display for visitors to see at

Dunloggin Lives On In Reedsville Herd

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

REEDSVILLE (Mifflin Co.) – "The trip to the barn is long enough," said dairyman James O. Reed of Reed Gap Farms nearby. "You'd better have something nice there."

The fifth generation to farm near the town that bears his family names, Reed is proud of his family heritage, his son's achievements in national judging competitions, and his herd's pedigree, nearly 95 percent of his 35-cow herd comes form two cow lines, Winterthur and Dunloggin.

Reed's Winterthur line branches from his purchase of Winterthur Kid Ivanhoe. She later scored Excellent.

Reed's line of Dunloggin Holsteins originates from his 1963 purchase of Wisbee Contender Sallee at the First Golden Harvest Sale in Harrisburg. Contender Sallee is a daughter of Curtiss Candy Sally Curtiss, a New York fat champion and daughter of Curtiss Candy Proud Sally (VG). Proud Sally placed first as an aged cow at the Minnesota State fair, was first on the 1952 national honor list with her 7-year-old production record, was an Illinois fat champion twice, and a cover-cow for Holstein World magazine.

James O. Reed's "Contender Sallee" had seven bulls and six heifers. Her oldest daughter (VG-87) had twins by Reed Gap Witnerthur HF. The Twins scored VG-87 and 2E-91. 2E-91's daughter became 2E-92. Contender Sallee also had two other daughters. By 1989, Reed was milking six head that had Dunloggin Elenora as their seventh dam.

Overall, the Winterthur and Dunloggin cross has proved valuable to Reed. In fact, his son Andy's six superior show animals are Dunloggin.

The Dunloggin line began in Wisconsin in 1928. Horace Backus published a two-volume history of the Dunloggins in 1990. What follows has been taken from these two volumes.

A Brief Dunloggin History

In 1926, lumberman Joseph W. Natwick purchased a farm just outside of Baltimore for its valuable stand of white oak. He cleared the timber then tried to sell the farm. Two years later he decided to dairy farm. He named the farm Dunloggin simply because he was "done loggin!"

Although his first cattle were grades, he started his registered herd by privately purchasing several Holsteins from W. L. Baird and the Waukesha County Holstein Breeders' Association in his home state of Wisconsin. Further purchases in late 1928 included "four great paternal sisters from one small farmer-breeder herd (the Wittig brothers)." Three of these contributed greatly to the outstanding Dunloggin bloodline, as did a herd sire from a famous Pabst Farms first All-American winner.

Farm Manager Paul B. Misner joined Natwick in December 1928 as farm manager and stayed until complete herd dispersal in 1943. He respected his employer's deep involvement in and working knowledge of the dairy animal and is credited for saying, "The most important fertilizer on any farm is the footstep of the owner."

Reed Gap Farms

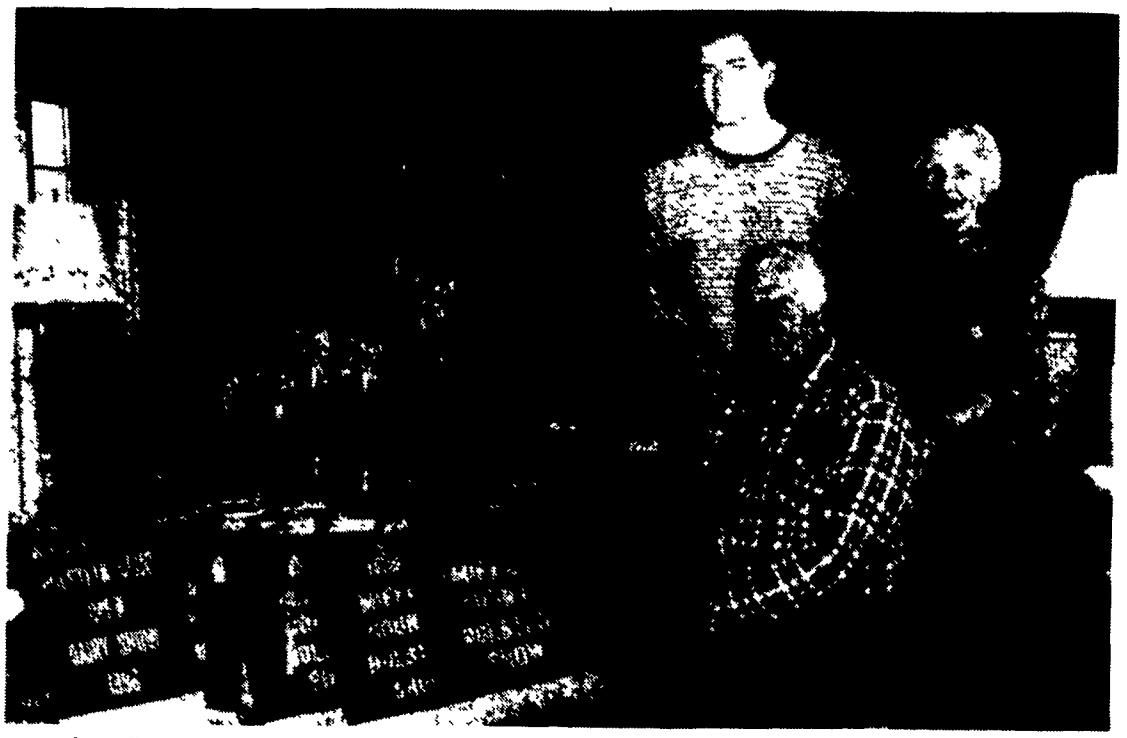
Sitting in the comfortable front room of his home, James O. Reed replays his family history. His youngest son Andy listens patiently again to the familiar story.

"In 1751, James Reed and his half-brother Judge Brown went from Cecil County, Maryland, to as far north as Williamsport. The following year, they decided to locate here in Mifflin County. James Reed married an Ogleby from the Carlisle area, that's where the 'O' comes from. They had 12 children. Their youngest son Abner built some of the first houses in Reedsville.

"My grandfather, Ogleby (Obe) James was born in 1835 to Abner's second family. In 1856, a freeze in June destroyed the wheat crop. Obe headed out west with the '49'ers. Later, his two brothers went out and brought him back. He married in 1886 and had my father, James Andrew Reed, the youngest of four children. Obe had a brother Andrew who studied at Dartmouth as an attorney. That's who Andy is named for.

"My father was a general farmer. He sold milk to the cheese factory. I started farming in 1951 with four cows and lost each one. I bought some grades from Tioga County and learned a lot about cows. I purchased a few registered cows then joined the Holstein Association in 1954.

James O. and his wife Mary have four children, Jim, 35; Sandy, 33; Lori, 30; and Andy, 19. The oldest three have chosen other careers. Andy is a freshman at Penn State majoring in dairy science.



Locally, the Reed family history dates back as far as 1751. James O. stands beside his father's tiger maple desk. His wife Mary is active in the Mifflin County Historical Society.

James O. Reed looks over his history book about Dunloggin Holsteins.

The Reed's live on a farm along the Back Mountain Road between Barrville and Reedsville. A 1780 log farmhouse owned by the Reed's sits two miles away above the gushing spring that feeds Coffee Run. As the story goes, that's where James O's ancestor named Brown saw the reflection of an Indian while drinking from the stream. It turned out to be Chief Logan, a long-time friend of the white man who camped at Logan Springs on Tea Creek near Reedsville.

All American Status

When it comes to dairy cattle, Andy Reed does a pretty good job. So good, in fact, that Andy placed 23rd overall (fourth in reasons) in dairy judging at the 1997 National 4-H Contest in Madison, Wis.

Andy helped this year' Pennsylvania team place second overall in the nation and first in reasons

In 1995, Andy's Mifflin County Dairy Judging Team placed first in Pennsylvania. Teammate Mike Kline went to Madison that year, followed by Mike Yoder in 1996. This year, Andy placed first place and went to Madison.

Andy's trophies may need carted home in another show box!

Andy first joined county-wide 4-H dairy judging teams under the leadership of Darv Yoder, Carolyn Loucks and, most recently, Sue Sellers.

Hans Herr FFA Mechanics Team Wins National

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

KANSAS CITY, MO — Pennsylvania 793 points. Minnesota 792 points.

When you are high school seniors and you win a national event by one point, you know you have been in a contest. When the team you edge out has won 10 out of the last 26 years and includes college students, you know you have reached your goal even though you didn't expect to win.

This is what happened to the agricultural mechanics FFA team from the Hans Herr Chapter at Lancaster Mennonite High School that placed first at the National FFA Agriculture Mechanics Career Development contest at the 70th National FFA Convention late last year. The award is the first for both LMH and for the state of Pennsylvania. In order to qualify for national competition, the LMH team placed first locally and in the state of Pennsylvania.

The winning team members are Jeff Nissley, son of Melvin and Marilyn Nissley, Middletown; Eric Martin, son of Galen and Nancy Martin, Mt. Joy; and David Smoker, son of Paul and Doris Smoker, Oxford. Andrew Harnish, son of James and Lois Harnish, Washington Boro, served as an alternate. Teacher Lem Metzler is the FFA advisor.

The team members are very modest in their appraisal of their abilities. They said they were suprised by their first place finish but admitted it was one of their goals. Actually they would have been happy to come in around 15th place out of 44 teams.

Metzler said that because the youths work so well as a team they came to the top. From the section that required all members of the team to be involved in developing a computer model of a farm with all the components in place, they came in second in the nation. But the individual scores were good too. Nissley, Martin, and Smoker placed fifth, seventh, and ninth respectively.

The agricultural mechanics event is one of 18 national competitive events held each year at the national FFA convention. The event is sponsored by the Firestone Agricultural Tire Company in conjunction with the Bridgestone/Firestone Trust Fund, and the National FFA Foundation.

In competition, the team was required to take a two-hour written test and complete a two-hour team problem that involved making major systems changes in an agriculture production unit and reporting their analysis and solutions with a computer generated document. On the second day of competition, team members demonstrated their skills and knowledge through hands-on activities in five ag mechanics systems areas. For example, constestants were required to calculate the percentage of a farm land slope and determine if it would be safe for farm equipment. The areas in which the participants were tested included: energy systems, industry/marketing systems, machinery and equipment systems, environmental/natural resource systems, and structural systems.

Metzler was thrilled with his students' accomplishments. He said it is nice to win, but it is even greater to have students win with the high peronal integrity and standards found in these young men. Each winning team member received a $1,000 scholarship for post-high school education.

FFA is a national organization of 448,954 members preparing for leadership and careers in the science, business, and technology of agriculture. The organization has 7,263 local chapters located in the U.S., Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.

FFA's mission is to make a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership, personal growth and career success through agricultural education. Local, state, and national activities and award programs provide opportunities for students to apply knowledge and skills learned in the classroom.

LMH is a parochial school headquarted east of Lancaster. The Hans Herr Chapter was chartered in January, 1993.

Human Resource Questions And Answers For Today's Farmers

When do I know I need to hire a farm hand?

How do I develop a solid job description?

How much can I afford in salary and benefits?

Where do I start to look for a good employee?

What characteristics are most important in selecting an employee?

What are my legal and accounting responsibilities?

Do I need full-time, part-time, or seasonal help? Which is best for me?

How many times have you asked yourself these same questions during a hectic planting or harvest season when there are just not enough hours in the day? Where can you find reliable answers from credible sources that you can relate to your unique farming operation?

As agriculture becomes increasingly complex, today's successful farmers realize the key to their survival involves smart decision-making. The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry invites you to join us for our fifth annual Farm Financial Management School to be held on Thursday, January 29, 1998, at the Country Table Restaurant located in Mount Joy, Pa. This annual program is an intensive all-day seminar on employee-related topics designed for owners of today's complex farming operations.

The limited class size and the chance for managers to bring their own personal situations and questions makes this a great opportunity to find answers to agriculture's tough business questions. Participants in the school each receive a detailed notebook of reference and study materials provided by the instructors for their use in further analyzing their own business situation.

Two dynamic and nationally recognized instructors have been secured based on their experience and ability to work "ground level" with intensive agriculture operations. Bernie Erven is a professor of Agriculture Economics at Ohio State University and Gary Heim, an attorney, whose clientele primarily lies within the agriculture community.

We will also feature a panel of farmers moderated by Dennis Ginder, farm management specialist for Lancaster and Chester County Penn State Cooperative Extension. The panel will also focus on human resource experience as well as any other financial topic which interests the group.

The deadline for registration is January 16, 1998 and will be limited to a "first come-first served" basis. Registration fee is $100 per person and includes all meals and materials. Production agriculture Lancaster Chamber members receive a 25 percent discount and any farmer joining the chamber will also receive the reduced rate. If you have any questions please do not hesitate to call Jim Shirk at 397-3531 or contact your local ag lender.

Organic Milk Production Topic Of Extension Seminar

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — Does receiving $22 per hundred for your milk interest you? Would you like to milk 40 cows and provide a good living for your family? If the answer is yes, then you may be interested in organic milk production. Interest is high in organic production. But, there is a great deal to know and consider before any dairyman takes the decision to become organic.

To help interested persons learn more about organic milk production, the advantages and disadvantages, the economic reality, and the marketing opportunities, Penn State and Rutgers Cooperative Extension are sponsoring an organic production seminar.

The speakers will include veterinarians, regulators, economic experts, marketers and producers from Pennsylvania and Vermont.

The program will include these sessions: The Process of Organic Certification, Herd Health in an Organic Production System, The Bottom Line in Producing Organic Milk, Market Opportunities for Organic Milk, On-farm Manufacture and Marketing of an Organic Product, and Producing Organic Milk/Some Dairymen's Perspective.

The meeting will be held January 29, 1998 at the Holiday Inn in Phillipsburg, N.J., just across the border from Easton, Pa. It will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. Cost is $20. Registration is made through Rutgers Cooperative Extension at 908-475-6503.

Learning By Showing More Important Than Winning For Berks Farm Show Family

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — Perhaps when showtime nears but before the exhibitors hear the announcement for an approaching judging class, the hogs get their nicknames.

These names could be Freddy the first, in honor of that prehistoric cartoon character on TV. Some could be named after a friend or family member that you can't forget. Maybe after some famous personality. Maybe after a movie, like "Thelma and Louise." Or maybe just the way the pig behaves.

"Last year we named them after friends or neighbors," said Matt Manbeck.

Matt, 13, together with his sister, Anita, 16, are preparing for the big show. Right now they know their hogs by numbers. But at Farm Show, before the show ring is no longer a dream but a reality, the hogs will get their names.

In the meantime, two weeks before the big event, the son and daughter of Herman and Connie Manbeck of Womelsdorf were making the final decisions on what two hogs they would take to the show.

For both, this is their fifth Farm Show.

So far, the Berks County 4-H Swine Club members have their sights on Cambrio 22 (C-22) hogs from a 405 boar. Matt's gilt weighs 180 pounds and Anita's about 210 pounds, two weeks before showtime. The Hampshire/Duroc/York/Landrace gilts are both the products of their own farm and out of a program that has already garnered awards at the county level.

Anita and Matt Manbeck help feed and care for 200 sows and 1,000 head of finishing hogs in Womelsdorf. They also care for a 240-head finisher and another 400 head of finishing swine at a nearby farm, for a total of 4,000 head per year.

Anita Manbeck's advice to would-be Farm Show swine exhibitors? "Stay calm and relaxed," she noted. "Don't get frustrated. Groom and prepare them — use good old ivory soap. And clean out the ears of the pigs."

Along with helping at the family's 48-acre (41 tillable) farrow-to-finish farm in Womelsdorf, Anita is busy with FFA membership, as president of the county swine club, is on the high school track and field hockey teams, and works at Risser's Diner.

Matt, in the 8th grade at Conrad Weiser, was named champion fitter and champion heavyweight at this year's county roundup. At Kutztown, Matt, five-year 4-H member, won first place in the heavyweight class.

Anita, a junior at Conrad Weiser High School and vice president of the school's FFA chapter, also serves as president of the county swine club. The eight-year 4-H member was named grand champion showman in the senior division at this year's roundup and reserve overall. Anita captured grand champion in the swine market classes at the 1996 roundup.

She also won grand champion carcass on foot in 1996 at the Kutztown Fair.

Anita was quick to point out that competing is not important to them — learning and making friends are.

The competitive events at 4-H, Anita noted, are "so overrated. We like to have fun." Without having the opportunities available through 4-H, "I wouldn't know half the people I know," she said.

Matt agrees. He noted it was vital to prepare the animal well and more important to have the "proper instructions in fitting than just getting first place," he said.

Matt said that as a result of his 4-H experiences, he has learned how to properly walk and care for the swine, how to groom them for the show, and get the hogs to be cooperative in the show ring.

At last summer's Kutztown Fair Beef Show, swine judge Keith Bryan, a Penn State instructor who speaks about show ethics in his Lancaster Farming column, "It's Showtime," took time with each exhibitor at the event to point out what they did right — or wrong.

"I never saw a judge do that," said Connie Manbeck. "It is a learning experience and so important for the kids."

Matt recently undertook a 4-H beef heifer project. He cares for a purebred Angus heifer, Peaches, and two Angus/Simmental crossbreds. One crossbred, "Mary," was bred and Matt became the "toast" of the 4-H club.

Anita recalls that during the Mardis Gras at the Kutztown Fair, the Manbecks took along Mary. They "borrowed" a lamb from another exhibitor and kidded Matt. They spoke about how "Mary had a little lamb," and had a good time.

Along with helping at the family's 48-acre (41 tillable) farrow-to-finish farm in Womelsdorf, Anita is busy with FFA membership, as president of the county swine club, is on the high school track and field hockey teams, and works at Risser's Diner.

Matt, already an FFA member, works with the county 4-H team and is on the school's wrestling team.

"We're just everywhere," said Matt.

Both help feed and care for 200 sows and 1,000 head of finishing hogs in Womelsdorf. They also care for a 240-head finisher and another 400 head of finishing swine at a nearby farm, for a total of 4,000 head per year.

Both are heavily involved with the 4-H livestock judging team.

"They did well with livestock judging," said their mother, Connie Manbeck. In 1997, team members placed second in the junior division at the state level — up from 7th place in the division in 1996.

As for the Farm Show, the Man-

Sultenfuss Elected Vice Chairman, PPI Board Of Directors

NORCROSS, Ga. – John H. Sultenfuss, senior vice president, marketing and sales, CF Industries, Inc., was elected vice chairman of the Potash & Phosphate Institute (PPI) board of directors at a recent meeting.

"We are pleased that John Sultenfuss has accepted this important role for next year," said Dr. David W. Dibb, president of PPI. "His leadership of the Finance Committee of the PPI board for the past year was greatly appreciated."

During his 25-year career with CF Industries, Sultenfuss has held a number of management and executive positions for the interregional cooperative headquartered in Long Grove, Ill. In 1972, he joined the company at its phosphate complex in Plant City, Fla.

Throughout the 1970s and 1980s, his position included general manager of the phosphate complex in Bartow, Fla.; vice president, nitrogen operations; and vice president, supply & distribution. He was named vice president, marketing and sales, in 1988, and became senior vice president in 1995. A native of Tampa, Fla., Sultenfuss earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from the University of Florida in 1969.

Sultenfuss serves as chairman of Canadian Fertilizers Limited, a nitrogen fertilizer manufacturing entity jointly owned by CF, Cooperative Federee de Quebec, Growmark, and Western Canadian Fertilizers Limited. He will also serve as vice chairman of the Foundation for Agronomic Research (FAR) board of directors during 1998. He is a director of ACDI/VOCA, a consolidation of Agricultural Cooperative Development International and Volunteers in Overseas Cooperative Assistance.

becks will have their work cut out for them.

When picking swine to show, Anita noted they look for pigs that show a lot of length at 45 pounds. They also look for hogs that have good movement — important to winning swine shows.

Looking back over the years, 1996 stands out pretty heavily in their minds.

Severe snowstorms which shut down the entire state also stranded many at the Farm Show.

Matt recalls trying to sleep on feed bags in the small arena. Anita remembers getting up at 2 in the morning to wash down more than 50 swine in preparation for the next day's show.

Anita remembers being part of a daily videotape and broadcast of a show coordinated by Rep. Sheila Miller, in which Anita and other Berks County 4-H members spoke about their experiences.

The family often fields questions from the general public about their work at Farm Show and also, in the spring, during Ag In the Classroom visits to the farm. Matt recalls one 8th grade classmate's response to the question: what is a steer? The classmate's answer, Matt says with a chuckle, was "a female bovine." For another it was even worse. The answer to a bull — a "male cow," Matt noted.

Anita's advice to would-be Farm Show swine exhibitors? "Stay calm and relaxed," she noted. "Don't get frustrated. Groom and prepare them — use good old Ivory soap. And clean out the ears of the pigs."

Connie Manbeck noted that a judge's decision in a tiebreaker will sometimes be to examine the ears of the swine.

For Matt, cleaning the ears and hooves are the "hardest things to do," he said. The hock gets dirty and can present challenges for exhibitors.

At the county level, Anita and Matt recall the "water battles" on Friday night at Kutztown, after most of the judging contests are over. But for Farm Show, and especially for 4-H membership, Anita recalls that "winning isn't everything," she said.

"I've met a lot of people through 4-H," she said. "Some of the best times I've had are from 4-H."

their own pace, beginning Monday in the second floor of the Northeast Building, in the Family Living and Agricultural Learning Area, there are scheduled demonstrations of the skills and techniques in weaving, cooking, lace making, branch carving, and the making of old-fashioned children's toys and games, and floral designing.

There are two stages set up in the Family Living, Ag Learning Area, and educational and entertainment presentations are scheduled from Monday through Thursday, with each day devoted to different interests. (See the schedule of Family Living and Ag Learning Area events in Section B.)

Monday is Chef's Day, and is to feature cooking and meal presentation demonstrations.

Tuesday is Pennsylvania Floral Industry Day and along with a full day of presentations by floral design and care experts, there are to be presentations of spinning fine hairs, ornements, folk music, and a presentation on the world-renowned Martin Guitar Company.

Wednesday is Youth Day and is to feature the state's top 4-H public speaking contest winners, state winners in a special "Products for the Planet" contest; school agricultural education demonstrations; and at 6 p.m., the state championship bid calling contest, held by the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association.

Thursday doesn't have a special theme, but will feature folk and bluegrass music and a flower presentation, as well as the third annual micro-pong table tennis tournament.

Education is a key element in the presentations are the Farm Show, and it has become more and more emphasized each year, for good reason.

"We are now probably looking at the third generation removed from our agrarian society, and there are not many places you can go to, to get the same background (in agriculture) as we have here. They show people how they derive their food and fiber," Grumbine said.

Such types of changes have occurred with some of the competitive departments, such as in vegetable competitions.

While the number of entries isn't known until exhibitors bring them to Harrisburg and register them, the competition was changed somewhat last year to include educational displays that also get judged.

According to Delbert Voight, Lebanon County Extension agent who is vice chairman of the department, the whole format of the vegetable show has been changed.

"It basically used to be that ... people would bring the entries in and we would display and class them for judging," Voight said.

"But now we have displays with educational intent so that the average farmer and non-farm peroson can learn about what can be grown in Pennsylvania."

According to Voight, the diffe-

Addison Co-op Reports Successful Year

ADDISON, N.Y. – Addison Milk Producers Cooperative held their annual meeting recently at the Methodist Church in Addison, NY. The room was nearly bursting at the seams with the large turnout of members and their families. Everyone enjoyed the excellent dinner prepared by the Methodist women.

President Robert Nichols, of Addison, opened the meeting with his annual report. The Co-op had a successful year marketing their member's milk. Their premium program and reasonable hauling rates provided their members with the best net return in the area. He also announced that the patronage dividend checks would be distributed at the close of the meeting. Addison Co-op has consistently paid an annual patronage dividend. Nichols stated that he was please with progress made by the cooperative. They have had consistent growth for the past several years both in membership and milk volume.

James Patsos of United Ag Services presented quality awards to the top quality producers for the past year. The placing was very close. Addison has had a history of supplying quality milk to the market place. Each winner was provide with a certificate of recognition for their accomplishment and a monetary award. First place went to James and Patricia Welch of Troupsburg. Tied for second were Gregory and Cindy Thompson of Bath, NY and Dean and Betty Bieber of Prattsburg, NY. Tied for fourth place were Gary Button, and Robert and Valeri Button, both of Jasper. Deborah Margeson, of Bath, was awarded sixth place.

Patsos discussed the current market conditions and the uncertainties created by Federal Judge Doty's decision declaring Class I differentials illegal. He discussed United's efforts to maintain Class I differentials and add some sanity to the current milk price situation. At the close of his remarks, he unveiled the new "Addison Milk Co-op" barn signs to be distributed to all members. He suggested the members display them with pride since Addison is the leading Co-op in the area providing maximum return to their members.

During the business meeting, Robert Nichols and Robert Button were re-elected as directors. Officers for the New Year are Robert Nichols, President: Harold Knowles, Campbell, NY, Vice President; Phillip Marsh, Jasper, NY, Secretary; and Hubert Dininny, Addison, Treasurer.

Dairy farmers that produce milk in Steuben County and the surrounding area that would like to learn more about Addison Co-op's Market should contact Robert Nichols at (607) 359-2199 or United Ag Services at 1 (800) 326-4251.

rent commodity groups put up displays that get judged. He said that, for example, Mike Firestine, vice president of the Agrilending Group with Lebanon Valley National Bank, who raises beef cattle as well as a row crops and pumpkins in the Richland area, "... did a nice display on how to raise pumpkins."

Alletta Schadler, director of the Lebanon Extension Office, is to judge the displays for educational content, while Glenn Ellenberger, a retired county Extension agent from Lehigh County is judging the presentation of the displays.

Voight said also new are "inseason" competitions.

While those who operated roadside farm markets know that non-farmer customers have been known to ask for such out-of-season produce, such as local peaches in April, the commodity groups are trying to change that.

While few crops are actually "inseason" in January (not including aquaculture and climate controlled produce), Voight said that canned, dried, pickled and frozen produce can be displayed as "inseason."

"This is a showcase of Pennsylvania's agricultural industry," Grumbine said. "I am totally concerned with that, and a lot of credit has to go to a lot of people because of al lthe international people coming here to look at it."

Further, Grumbine said the mission of the Farm Show has always included the goal to educate farmers about new opportunities and production techniques.

That will be more and more important to the state's agricultural competitiveness and efficiency and economy.

"The world population expands every year by the size of the city of Los Angeles," Grumbine said. "We have doubled crop production since 1960, but we're going to have to triple it to keep up with world food demand.

"So we have got to make the best technology available to the farmer and to the rural areas of the commonwealth. The Farm Show does that."

For the past decade, improvements have been made to the Farm Show Complex.

Repeat visitors can expect to see some physical changes to the building. For example, an elevator was installed in the Large Arena structure that can accommodate handicapped passangers and take them to the third level, previously restricted to those using steps.

On the Maclay Street side of the building, the brass marques were refurbished and rewired and relit. The change restored some of the glamour to the building. Funding to pay for that improvement came out of excess funds from the Farm Show operating budget, Grumbine said.

Further, parking has been enhanced with a cooperative venture between the city of Harrisburg and the Farm Show.

The city has allowed undeveloped land to the west of the Farm Show Complex to be used by the Farm Show for parking up to 800 additional vehicles.

Grumbine said a bus company has been contracted to transport people from there to the Farm Show Complex.

The lot can be accessed from either Maclay Street or Industrial Road.

Also in a cooperative venture, Maryland State Fair has lent their tie-gates to be used in the Beef Barn (Northwest Building), to replace the horse stalls that have been historically used.

Visually obstructive, the horse stalls prevented visitors from easily viewing many of the beef entries. That will change.

There was more painting, including the Main Floor, where most commercial exhibits are placed.

"I think the building looks better than in all the years that I've shown here or been in this position," Grumbine said.

Additionally, an automatic teller (money access center) machine has been installed in a little red barn next to the North Entrance, where most of the general public enters the complex. The MAC machine is through the Pennsylvania State Employees Credit Union (PSECU).

For more information, seek one of the information desks, or call the PDA Press Office at 787-5085, or the Farm Show Office at 787-5373.

CSCE Ends 1997 With Record-Breaking Volume Trading Year

(NEW YORK, NY.) – Futures and options trading at the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange, Inc. (CSCE) reached historic proportions in 1997 with 13,066,042 total contracts traded -- the largest annual total volume since the founding of the Exchange in 1882. The record-setting performance surpassed the previous all-time annual volume record of 12,664,052 total contracts traded in 1994.

All the commodities markets (coffee, sugar, cocoa and dairy products) demonstrated strength in the past year. Overall futures trading set an all-time annual mark of 10,022,427 contracts. Options hit an all-time annual record of 3,043,615 contracts traded for the year. The last futures record of 9,947,040 contracts traded was established in 1994. The options record of 3,020,526 contracts had stood since 1990.

Individual markets set all-time records as well, with coffee and cocoa options both bypassing all-time volume records by mid-December of 1997. The trading of 1,272,767 coffee puts and calls in 1997 surpassed the 1994 record annual total of 1,208,925 coffee options. The new annual high of 399,408 cocoa options traded replaced the 1990 mark of 344,944 contracts. Cocoa traders also set and quickly topped record all-time open interest highs for both futures and options. The new options open interest mark of 64,900 contracts outstanding was established on November 6, 1997. Cocoa futures open interest high occurred on October 14 when 114,240 contracts were outstanding.

World sugar futures also experienced record activity as new open interest records were set in the last quarter of the year. On December 9, world sugar futures reached an open interest high of 210,419 contracts outstanding.

The Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange, Inc. is the world's leading marketplace for futures and options trading in these three international commodities, and since 1993, an innovator in futures and options trading in dairy markets.

Dunloggin Lives On

"I really like competing. Sue's a good coach. Everyone has a style. She doesn't change my style, but she sees things you might have missed," Andy said of his coach.

Andy owns 10 milking cows and four heifers in his father's herd. He hopes to serve on Penn State's Dairy Judging Team. After graduation, he plans to return home, build a modern facility, increase the size of the herd, and improve herd average and BAA.

While James O. still looks for bulls with a touch of Dunloggin in them, Andy is more attracted to the Canadian bloodlines. But one thing is for sure. Andy's formula for success will include wisdom learned from his father, you can't sell your best cow, and it takes a lifetime to build a herd.

Total Value Of Pennsylvania's Livestock On The Rise After Two-Year Decline

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The total value of all livestock in Pennsylvania is on the rise after a two-year decline and Lancaster County is leading the way.

The Pennsylvania State Data Center at Penn State Harrisburg reports the total value of livestock in the Commonwealth, including cattle, hogs and sheep was $1.38 billion at the end of 1996, an increase from $1.36 billion at the end of the previous year.

Lancaster County continues to be the center of farming activity in the state, leading in the number of cattle, milk cows, hog farms and sheep.

"The growing success of Lancaster County farmers is due to the vision of local farmers and their long-term commitment to their agricultural enterprises," said Jim Shirk, Agricultural Services manager for the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce.

Statistics compiled by Data Center show 33,000 Pennsylvania farms reporting cattle inventory in 1996, a number unchanged for the fourth consecutive year.

Cattle inventory in the Commonwealth totaled 1.75 million on Jan. 1, 1997. This was a 2.3 percent decrease from the previous year's total of 1.79 million. Among the states, Pennsylvania tied Idaho for 17th in cattle inventory. Lancaster County was the state leader with 241,000 head, followed by Franklin with 103,000 and Bradford with 86,500.

Pennsylvania again ranked fourth in milk cows at the start of 1997. Again, Lancaster County had the most milk cows (96,000) followed by Franklin County (45,000) and Bradford County (32,000). Pennsylvania cows produced 16,522 pounds of milk per cow for a total of 10,640 pounds. This production, in 1996, was valued at more than $1.667 million.

There were 950,000 hogs and pigs on Pennsylvania farms at the end of 1996. Although the inventory decreased 50,000 from 1995 to 1996, the total value of Pennsylvania's hog and pig inventory increased by $22,100,000 to $93,000,000.

The state has witnessed a continuing decline in the number of hog and pig farms, with the most recent yearly decline of 400 farms from 1995 to 1996. Currently, the number of hog and pig operations stands at 5,100 statewide, ranking Pennsylvania 13th nationally. Lancaster County had the most hog farms (695) followed by York (220) and Berks (205). Lancaster County also had the largest pig and hog inventory (315,000 head) followed by Lebanon County (73,000 head) and York County (68,000 head).

The sheep and lamb inventory, as of Jan. 1, 1997, totaled 94,000, down 12 percent from 1996. Pennsylvania's flocks included 81,000 breeding sheep and lambs and 13,000 market sheep and lambs. The total value of this livestock stood at $10.3 million at the end of 1996. It is estimated that 3,100 farms in Pennsylvania raised sheep and lambs with almost 400 of them in Lancaster County. Among the states, Pennsylvania ranks 19th in sheep and lamb inventory, down from 17th in 1995. Washington County had the largest sheep and lamb inventory, 8,300 head, as of Jan. 1, 1997, with Greene County second at 6,400 and Lancaster County third with 4,700.

The state-sponsored Pennsylvania State Data Center is the Commonwealth's official source of population and economic statistics and services. It is based in Penn State Harrisburg's Institute of State and Regional Affairs.

Cloning, Other Biotechnology Applications To Benefit Agriculture

MILWAUKEE, WIS. – Cloning and other biotechnology advances are tools farmers can use to produce more uniform and consistent food products.

That's according to Dr. Denny Funk, director of product development for ABS Global, Inc., a provider of bovine reproductive services and technologies.

Funk recently spoke at the 1997 National Agricultural Bankers Conference in Milwaukee.

"Biotechnology, and specifically cloning, has the real potential of helping producers improve the efficiency and profitability of their operation while enabling them to produce meat and grain products that better meet the demands of consumers," said Funk. He was one of four speakers on a panel that discussed the current state of biotechnology. Approximately 60 people attended the biotechnology session.

Earlier this year, ABS Global introduced to the world a healthy bull calf named "Gene" produced from its proprietary cloning technology. Gene was the world's first cloned calf.

According to Funk, Gene was developed from a unique cloning technique using stem cells, a process different than what was used to produce Dolly, the first cloned sheep. "ABS' cloning technology duplicates adult animals much more efficiently than other techniques, " said Funk. "Our procedure also allows us to make an infinite number of copies of the animal."

Funk and other panel members noted that biotechnology advances will help "close the loop," leading to more vertical integrated operations that could benefit smaller operations. Biotechnology will enable average farmers to produce consistent products and products for specific end uses that have often in the past been associated with large integrated operations. Biotechnology may also make it easier to bring value-added products to market.

Funk also noted that consistent dairy and beef products would help stabilize prices farmers receive for their products.

•We presently are marketing several medium and large dairy and beef operations in Wisconsin.

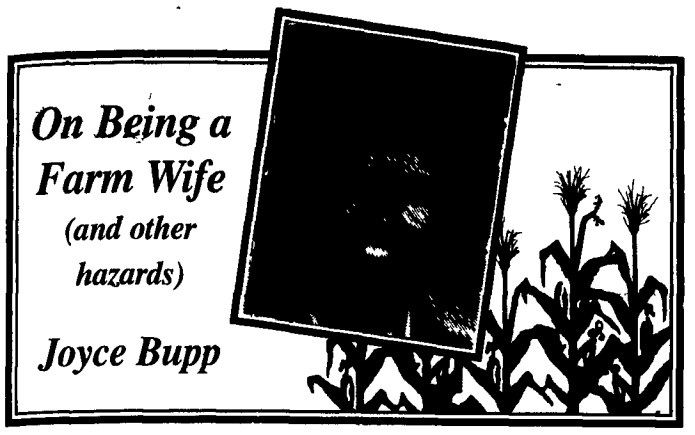
February	07-	Muffin Mania Week



Brace yourselves.

This is the week of the "big" snow.

Despite the fact that there are many years of negligible-or no-snow that falls on the Farm Show, history and tradition have combined to establish this week as the legendary one of blizzard horror tales. Of course, every now and then, as it did a couple of years ago, we do get the proverbial "big one" to keep the tradition alive, a major weather event which snowbounds exhibitors in Harrisburg and the rest of us at home.

After all, though, it is January and the weather odds are against sunny, balmy and 60 degree-temperatures. Though that's been known to play during Farm Show week, too.

"I hate snow," was a thought included in a recent message from a good friend. A fellow dairy producer, she may dread the extra work and mess that snow brings to handling cattle and moving machinery and feed. Despite that extra hassle, I still like snow. Well, most of the time, anyway.

Snow turns the drab, dreary, tired look of the countryside into a picturesque, greeting-card-like setting, adding a fantasy touch to the most ordinary and mundane of things.

Few scenes are more delightful to the eye than a deep-green pine tree frosted with fluffy white snow-icing on every needle, every branch. Tuck a brilliant red cardinal or a sky-colored blue jay out onto the end of one of the limbs and the striking picture is more beautiful than anything man could design.

Snow drapes fluffy accents over the split-rail fence around the yard and tops each post with a whimsical white cap. It covers the pile of leaves lingering in a corner of the yard and tidies up the scruffy look of the perennial border. And, clumps of old, dried weeds are transformed to dainty bouquets of lacy loveliness.

Against the white backdrop of snow, every tree in the woodlot stands out with greater individuality and prominence. Fallen trunks and old logs, once lost among the landscape of wintry browns and blacks, interject horizontal and angular lines across the vertical visual effect of the stand of dormant hardwoods.

This whiteness further enhances anything of color to cross its stage; the rusty red of a hunting fox, the dusty brown of a grazing deer, flashes of color from winter birds, even the bright hues of the tractor and equipment being shuttled around on daily feeding and cleanup chores.

The pounds take on a new dimension, their sparkling waters stilled beneath a silent crust of frosty, opaque ice. Strange tracks criss-crossee the ice last week, faintly resembling from a distance a series of railroad tracks. Near as I can guess, the tracks were made by our lone Canada goose that lingers here. The rows of faint, indiscernible prints must have come from the bird tracking across on the ice while it was slushy, and bits of snow settling later into each tiny, shallow depression.

That single goose, by the way, has adopted the cows as it "flock," spending most of its time with our bovine bunch. When they hang around the feedlot, so does the goose. When we put them out to graze, as we did until the snow stopped our pasturing of the fields of oats and rye cover, the goose nibbled at the grasses right along with the cows.

After a day or two, the fantasy prettiness of pristine snow deteriorates into messes of mud, patches of slippery or lumpy ice, hard-packed piles that must be negotiated around, and endless tracks dirtying the kitchen floor. At that point, I shared my friend's distaste for snow.

So we dream ahead of spring and green grass. And figure that, based on the winter's patterns so far, along with that posterchild for goofy weather-El Nino–maybe we can just write off a "big snow" this year and anticipate and early spring.

Meanwhile, go enjoy the Farm Show.

BUILDING THE FUTURE

Solanco FFA

Eight Solanco FFA members recently attended the National FFA Convention in Kansas City, the largest youth convention in the world. The conference ran Nov. 12-14.

Sara Strickler, Justine Hill, Jessica Schmidt, Dwayne Spangler, Robert Lowery, Jim Kerr, Jim Pelliccio, and Britina Robinson were accompanied by teacher Carey Kalupson during their trip to Kansas City, Mo.

Thousands of students, advisers, and guests attended the convention featuring more than 300 exhibitors representing agribusiness , agricultural organizations, machinery companies, colleges and universities, technical schools, computer firms, and commodity groups. FFA members also had the opportunity to explore various agricultural careers by attending the National Agricultural Career Show.

Solanco members earned the opportunity to attend the convention by points accumulated through their involvement in chapter activities during a three-year period. Three students - Sara Strickler, Justine Hill, and Jessica Schmidt - competed in the national Livestock Judging Contest while at the convention. The team of three took first place in livestock judging at the state judging contest and convention held at Penn State in June, qualifying them to compete at the national level.

In addition to attending the various convention sessions, Solanco members also visited several points of interest in the greater Kansas City area. Included were stops at the American Royal Rodeo, Blackhawk, and the Kansas City Zoo/Imax Theater.

Along the way, the members traveled the scenic Skyline Drive stopping in Charlottesville to tour the Rhedburg Stables (thoroughbred breeding and training) and in Louisville, Ky to tour Churchill Downs, Kentucky Derby Museum, and the Louisville Slugger Museum. The group also toured the Gateway Arch and Busch Stadium.

Outstanding Annuals In 1997

Last week we looked at several outstanding perennials that Dr. Robert Berghage evaluated at the University Park Trial Gardens in 1997. They included Echinacea Magnus, Heuchera Purple Palace, Eryngium Blaukappe, and Digitalis Apricot.

This week we will look at several outstanding annuals including verbenas, marigolds, petunias, begonias and others

In all, Dr Berghage, staff and volunteers planted over 800 cultivars in the 1997 trial gardens Their results are reported in "Friends of the Garden, Fall, 1997

Real standouts, in 1997 were Verbena Romance Pink, and Romance Deep Rose They performed very well, with numerous bright flowers in July and August Heirloom Apple blossom and Heirloom Light Blue produced pastel flower colors that make a nice display combined and other bedding-plants Verbena Imagination, a former AAS winner grew well, but flowered poorly

It was also a very good year for the seed geraniums like the cultivar Marvick Star, was outstanding with vigorous growth, and good flower production The gazania were very nice this year too Daybreak Bright Orange and Daybreak Red Stripe were both vigorous and flowered profusely.

Many annual plants started slowly last May but finished strong by September the fibrous begonia performed well late into the season Victory Greenleaf Rose was one of the nicest, with outstanding flower color and contrasting foliage

The cultivar Lima White was especially uniform. Nierembergia Mont Blanc an AAS selection grew more slowly than usual early in the season, but as it has in the past, was an outstanding groundcover by mid to late August, and performed well right into September.

The zinnia cultivars Profusion Rose and Profusion Orange entered by the All American Selections program were two of the most colorful plants in the garden in August and September.

They were vigorous and uniform, did not suffer from any disease problems and were only slightly bothered by Japanese beetle.

The marigolds were all smaller than normal in 1997, but all performed well late into the season. Several of the nicer cultivars were Luna Orange, Luna Yellow, Hero Bee and Safari Tangerine.

The vincas were slow growing and small. However a few seemed to be able to tolerate the cooler season better than others. The Cooler series was best. The cultivar Cooler Icy Pink was best.

The grandiflora petunias performed much more poorly than the other types (floribunda and multifloras). Storm White was the best white in the trials. By far the best overall petunias were the "wave" series, Pink Wave and Purple Wave.

Of the milliflora petunias the best cultivar is still Fantasy Pink Morn. Lirica Showers Blue and Lirica Showers Rose were interesting new petunias for this year.

They have very small flowers (1/2 inch) and tiny leaves on prostrate almost woody stems. They performed well in the garden.

Another interesting "new" plant for the University Park garden was he Cape Daisy (Osteorpermum). These plants flowered well in the spring but flowering dropped off in the summer. In the fall many succumbed to disease, with the exception of the cultivar Seaside.

White plants on both sides died, these plants were still going strong in September. They produced a reasonable number of light purple daisy like flowers all season long which graced their dark green succulent foliage. This cultivar was vigorous but compact.

The most interesting new impatiens were the cultivar Super Elfin Sunrise. This cultivar had spectacular unique flowers with orange centers and fuchsia edges.

There were a number of nice cut flower plants in the garden this year. Sunflower Valentine had numerous nice medium/small lemon yellow flowers on long stems. Cut flower asters of the Matador series from benary were nice double flowered asters.

The cultivar Matador Fiery Red for example was red with white centers on long stems. These plants flowered a bit later than other cut flower asters in the garden but they were worth the wait.

For a complete summary write to : Dr. Robert Berghage, director, Horticulture Trial Gardens, 102 Tyson Bld, University Park, PA 16802. Please include a $10 check made out to the Pennsylvania State University,

4-H Babysitting Course For Teens At Five Locations This Winter

Do you wish you could babysit? Or do you watch a younger brother or sister after school while your parents work?

If you answered yes to either of these questions, then consider taking the 4-H babysitting course.

Your own parents and those in your neighborhood, too, will feel better leaving you alone with others if you've taken a babysitting training course.

The 4-H babysitting course is designed to help prepare young teens to babysit their siblings and other youngsters safely and to deal with emergencies that may come up while babysitting.

The 4-H course will be offered at five different locations in Montgomery County this winter: at the 4-H Center in Skippack, at Tabor United Methodist Church in Woxall, at the Upper Perkiomen Library in Red Hill, at Pottstown Senior High School, and at the Montgomery Township Municipal Building in Montgomeryville. Preregistration is necessary.

For courses at the 4-H Center, Tabor Church and Montgomery Township, call the 4-H Center at (610)489-4315. To register for the Upper Perk course, call the library at (215)679-2020. For the Pottstown course, call the Parks and Recreation Department at (610)970-6608.

The winter schedule is as follows: 4-H Center: Thursdays, Jan. 29 through March 5, from 6:30 p.m.-8:30 p.m.; Tabor Church: Tuesdays, Jan. 6 through Feb. 3, from 6:30 p.m.-8:15 p.m.; Upper Perkiomen Library: Wednesdays, Feb. 4 through March 18 (skipping Ash Wednesday), from 7 p.m.-8:30 p.m.; Pottstown SHS: Tuesdays, Jan. 27 through March 3, from 6:30 p.m.-8 p.m.; and Montgomeryville: Thursdays, Jan. 8 through Feb. 5, from 6:45 p.m.-8:30 p.m. Please be sure to allow an extra week for possible snow days.

There is a $10 fee for the babysitting course, payable at the door. Scholarships are always available with no questions asked. All course materials will be provided by the 4-H program and participants will become 4-H members as a result of taking the course. The Lansdale Kiwanis club cosponsors the program as part of Kiwanis International's major emphasis to help young children from newborn to six years old.

The following topics will be covered: babysitter's responsibilities, child development and appropriate toys for a child's age, feeding, diapering, infant care, first aid and sitter safety. Those who successfully complete the course will receive a 4-H completion certificate. In order to successfully complete the course, you must attend all sessions. Information presented in each session is no less important in one than in another. You must also show maturity and readiness to babysit. 4-H believes that babysitting is serious business.

All courses will also include the American Heart Association "Choke is No Joke" program, which provides instruction on the Heimlich maneuver and how to prevent choking. The AHA does not charge a fee for this program. Certificates of Achievement are awarded to those who successfully complete this important part of the 4-H babysitting course.

Class size is limited for maximum educational value. You must be at least 11 years old before the course begins to participate. For additional information, please call Helaine Brown, 4-H agent, at (610)489-4315, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Build A Better Breakfast

CRUNCH CEREAL

12 cups quick or rolled oats
6 cups coconut or less
6 cups wheat germ or bran
3 cups brown sugar
3 teaspoons salt
1 pint oil
1 pint cream or milk
3 tablespoons vanilla

Mix together dry ingredients. Mix liquids and add to the dry. Stir well.

Bake in flat pans at 300 degrees until lightly browned, stirring occasionally, approximately one hour or more. Store in airtight container.

Sesame seeds, raisins, etc., can be added. May add more oats in place of coconut or bran.

This is delicious and does not last long at our house. It is a special treat since it takes so long to bake I usually triple the recipe.

Farm Show Stirs Special Memories

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) — Remember the state police rodeos held at the Pennsylvania Farm Show? Again and again people recall that it was one of their favorite parts of the farm show.

"It was the highlight of the day," said Anna Martin who remembers sitting in the large arena waiting for the rodeo to begin.

Anna Martin's fondest farm show memories are of police rodeos and her son's acceptance of the Keystone Farmer Degree.

The police rodeo is no longer held.

Anna has been attending the state farm show since she was 12 years old. Looking back over the 40 years she has attended, Anna said that her fondest memory was when her son Dale received the Keystone Farmer Degree in 1984. At that time, the degrees were bestowed in the state forum. A shuttle bus transported parents from the Farm Show Arena to the forum. "It was a real honor," Anna said of watching her son receive the state award.

Anna plans to attend the Farm Show this year in a different capacity. She will assist in taking students from the Ephrata Middle School multi-disability class to the show. Anna works as a full-time aide with the multi-disability class.

Cooking Tips

Q. Is there a difference in cooking with aluminum foil using the shiny side or the dull sign?

A. When aluminum foil is used in cooking, the dull side absorbs slightly more heat than the shiny side. If you want optimum browning of a food product, have the dull side facing out.

- Use a hot oven temperature (425°) for the first 15 minutes of baking.
- A glass or dull aluminum pan cooks the bottom crust better than a shiny metal pan.
- Chill pastry for an hour before adding filling.
- Avoid cracks or holes in pastry which allows filling to seep into or under crust.
- Bake on the shelf nearest the bottom of the oven.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Over the holidays we had lots of family visit us. One night we had nine sleeping here and the next day we had 38 at a drop-in party.

The main attraction for the children was our four kittens and the snowfall. They managed to make a small snowman but the kittens were a constant attraction. They liked to bring them in the house for their dish of milk and kitten chow. We may even have managed to give one away.

One of my sisters gave me a very nice framed picture of my mother when she was only five years old. She is holding her favorite doll and is wearing high-buttoned shoes. Another framed photograph is of a family of four who live in New Jersey.

We were given enough snack food to last for several months. At least, I hope that we can stretch it out for a few weeks. This year my husband got clothing instead of me. My daughters gave gift certificates from a seed catalog and I'll certainly enjoy shopping for flowers. I have already picked out some that I want to try to grow next summer.

Our daughter's family from Georgia had to drive home through snow and ice. No wonder they like to visit in the spring and summer. But when they got home, they had five inches of snow too.

A second Habitat house has been completed by our church members and an Ethiopian family has moved in. They spent 100 hours on other people's homes and another 400 hours on their own. It was a two-year process for them but they were able to move in with their two children just before Christmas. It took commitment to stick to the job of carrying in cement blocks, hammering, sanding, and painting. They are happy to have a house of their own.

3½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
1 cup milk

Mix together dry ingredients. Stir in 1 cup milk and cheese. Roll out dough into large rectangular shape ½ -inch thick. Cut into strips 1x3-inches. Melt ½ cup butter in a cookie sheet with 4 sides. Roll dough strips in butter and place on the same pan until full. Sprinkle seasonings on top if desired such as oregano, garlic, onion salt, dry ranch dressing mix. Preventing Illness In Child Care

Children often pass germs around at child care, but to prevent illness, a trained child care provider will make sure that the children are protected as much as possible. Parents, check to see if your child's caregiver is doing the following:

•Frequent hand washing - this is important to prevent the spread of germs and infections. Providers must wash their hands before preparing and serving food, including baby bottles, before setting the table, after diapering, after bathroom routines, and before and after giving medication. The children need to wash hands before meals and snacks and after diapering and bathroom routines. Anyone who has a cold, should wash hands more often during the day, especially after sneezing, coughing or blowing noses. Child care providers must wash hands after wiping a child's nose or mouth. Be sure to wash hands after pets and other animals are handled.

•Cleaning routines - diapering, bathroom areas, and food preparation and serving areas must be cleaned daily. disinfecting solutions should be used on surfaces. The solutions need to be made fresh daily as they lose their effectiveness if left longer.

•Play areas need to be cleaned and aired out daily. It's important for rooms to be aired daily and to have good ventilation, as germs gather in small enclosed places.

•Outdoor play - a chance to play outdoors helps keep kids healthy. Fresh air in a large space contains fewer germs.

•Toys - small toys should be washed and disinfected daily with larger toys done weekly.

Child care providers are always looking for new ideas and information. Have your child's provider call toll-free at 1-800-452-9108 to order free educational materials from Penn State Cooperative Extension's Better Kid Care Project.

Mealtimes At Childcare

A quality child care program will provide the children with well-balanced, nutritious meals. Mealtimes are important times for kids and they benefit in many ways. When enrolling your child in child care, find out what meal times are like.

•Well-balanced meals provide the food to help children grow, think, and have energy.

•Mealtime routines help children feel secure when they know what to expect.

•Children learn language and social skills during mealtimes by conversing with the caregiver and each other. It is a good time to model table manners and correct behavior.

•While feeding themselves, children use fine motor skills. They also learn about counting, colors, shapes, amounts, smells, temperatures, and tastes.

•Self-help skills are learned as they help set the table, pour liquids, and serve food. Being able to do these things helps build-self-esteem in children.

•When hand washing and cleaning routines are modeled, the children learn good health and safety practices.

Smart Stuff
WITH TWIG WALKINGSTICK
Rhonda Nichols from McIntosh, Ala., wants to know
Why do zebras have stripes?
Two reasons: to tell each other apart and to confuse animals that want to eat them!
There are three different kinds of zebras. Each type has a specific kind of shape and behavior — and stripe pattern. One kind has wide stripes that go up and down, another has a lot of skinny vertical strips, and the third has stripes that swirl together by the back legs in a specific pattern. But even within a species of zebras, no two are exactly alike. Their stripes are as unique to them as your fingerprints are to you.
And the part about confusing predators? Well, the black and white patterns don't help zebras hide from hungry animals. In fact, wildlife specialists say zebras are easy to see on the African plains where they run. But the uneven spacings of the stripes can make it pretty hard to tell the zebra's shape, especially when they're running together in a big herd. That makes it harder for a starving lion to pick one to attack.
Next time you are at a zoo — or if you ever visit the African plains — look closely at two zebras standing close together. It's almost impossible to tell where one zebra stops and the other begins!
Scientifically yours,
Twig

Draw Yourself

Find some paper large enough for you to lie down on. A wide roll of shelf paper or brown craft paper works well. Ask a parent or older brother or sister to trace your outline with a heavy black marker or crayon.

Draw your face, hair, and clothing on the paper portrait of yourself.

Pointers For Parents

Help Kids Battle Winter Creativity Blues

(NAPS)—Despite the pleasures of holiday festivities, family get-togethers and cold-weather fun, many children experience the indoor wintertime blues. Often brought on by time-consuming school projects, increased indoor activity and gray, cloudy days, these glum moods call for a creative outlet to unleash kids' imaginations during the winter season.

With a little help from parents, kids will realize that school and holiday projects can be a fun and easy part of at-home activity.

"Many kids don't realize that their home computer, favorite printing software and ink jet printer can serve as their own personal print shop and as a source for at-home fun," said Joe Nezwek, director of marketing for the Avery Kids™ group at Avery Dennison. Research conducted by Avery Dennison indicates that kids like to watch their designs come to life, from the computer screen through the printer and onto tangible stickers and cards they can play with for hours.

Whether adding flair to school assignments with personalized stickers or creating customized holiday cards and invitations, kids can use their imagination, along with the help of Avery Kids™ products, to battle the boredom. Kids can also access a variety of different kid-friendly web sites such as Avery Kids web site at www.avery.com/kids where they can download clip art "stamps" and exchange project ideas with other kids.

Kids can experience "printer magic" both on and off the computer by incorporating their printing projects into the world of their imaginations. Playing teacher with A+ stickers and imaginary lessons, creating business cards for the "new club on the block" or designing laminated ID cards for soccer games and backpack name tags is easy and fun in the kids' print shop. Parents can also feel reassured that computer time often leads to interactive and imaginative playtime with friends.

Using products such as the Avery Kids Printertainment™ Software Kit and Supplies Packs or Mickey's Stickers & Stuff Printing Fun Kit, kids can use their personalized stickers and cards for a variety of projects for school and home.

Here are a few examples of printer fun. Kids can:

- Use customized stickers to highlight and illustrate the important facts of science projects, geography reports or president's biographies—from T. Rex's toes, to Colorado's capital, to President Kennedy's Camelot.
- Create eye-catching reports by designing personalized covers.
- Import photos to create personalized cards and invitations for teachers and classmates.
- Stake your turf by decorating bedroom doors and school lockers with attention-grabbing signs.
- Add magic to sporting events by printing each team member their own laminated ID card.

When shopping for the best materials for their children's print shop, parents should look for:

- high quality printer supplies that best highlight their children's work;
- products that won't damage the family printer,
- easy-to-use importing and photo capabilities; and
- added features such as re-stickable stickers that can continually be removed and "re-stuck" without damage to the sticker or to the objects on which they are stuck.

So next time the kids complain about the winter blues, unleash their imagination and let them create fun holiday and school projects. Their personalized stickers and cards will be sure to entertain them for hours and their extra creativity just might boost their grades.

Establish Natural Habitats

KULPVILLE (Montgomery Co.) – A growing interest in creating and maintaining natural habitats was evident at a recent day-long workshop sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and its Montgomery County Recycling Program, and the Montgomery County Planning Commission. More than 180 people attended the Natural Habitats workshop in Kulpsville that focused on converting manicured grounds into more natural landscape. Participants, a majority of whom were commercial and public landscape professionals, came from Pennsylvania, Delaware, and New Jersey.

"This was the first workshop of its kind," says Julianne Schieffer, the extension's urban forestry agent, "and we were overwhelmed by the positive response."

Gary San Julain, professor of Wildlife Resources at Penn State University, opened the workshop with a presentation on the basic needs of wildlife. The nine workshop speakers emphasized the importance of promoting native plants and wildlife and discussed methods used to foster a natural environment. From the public sector, the following organizations shared their experience with the audience: Washington Crossing Historic Park, Natural Lands Trust in Ambler, Heritage Conservancy in Doylestown, Valley Forge Park, and Green Lane Reservoir Park. In addition, a representative from Robert Trent Jones Golf Club in Lake Manassas, VA and the facilities manager of Hersey Mills in West Chester, spoke of how they incorporate natural habitat management practices into managing their facilities.

Nancy Minich of the Heritage Conservancy shared some habitat designs including how a housing development's unused open area was converted, using native grasses and plants, into a beautiful wetland with foot bridges and walking paths. The Environmental Education Specialist from Green Lane Reservoir Park, Kevin Crilley, showed how to crate a butterfly garden and described the benefits of planting it.

Flavia Rutkosky, Fish and Wildlife Biologist of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Smryna, Delaware, spoke of several financial and professional resources available to individuals and organizations to help create natural habitats.

For information about establishing a natural habitat or attending a future natural habitat workshop, contact Montgomery County Cooperative Extension Office at (610) 489-4315.

Twenty Years Baking Pies For Farm Show Competitions

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — "It was a challenge just to see how good I could do," Virginia McKee Smith of Lewistown comments about her 20 years of entering home canned or baked goods at the Farm Show. She's had a lot of experience. She and her husband Nelson raised four children on their Ferguson Valley Road dairy farm, where she has canned and baked to feed the family.

This energetic petite grandmother of four lives in the same huge red brick farmhouse in which her grandparents raised 10 children. Her father, who'd never been in the hospital, lived in the house until age 96. Virginia was born and raised here and now shares her home with son Steve and his wife Amy. Steve and Amy milk 75 head while brother Barry helps work the 100 tillable acres of McKeestead Farm's 200 acres. The Smiths also rent neighboring farmland. Virginia's husband Nelson is in Ohesson Manor following a stroke. She sees him nearly every day and tries to bring him home once a month.

"We were married 50 years this past summer, so I've done a lot of cooking," Virginia says as she deftly shapes sweet rolls that she's making that day in the comfortable kitchen. The sweet roll recipe she's mixed together came from neighbor Kathryn Fisher. It was printed in their Ellen Chapel Church cookbook. She bakes something nearly every day.

"I won first (at the Farm Show) for rolls several times. In fact, I won first place with a Peanut Butter Temptations recipe I clipped from Lancaster Farming."

Virginia says that former extension agent Clair DeLong encouraged her to enter the Farm Show. She was active in the Women's Extension group, and DeLong often took entries to the Farm Show for anyone who wanted to participate.

Virginia stops what she's doing to run down the steps to the basement. Returning, she climbs the steps back to the kitchen more slowly, carefully carrying jars of her hard work. She's holding pints of dill pickles and her version of "chow-chow." One jar still has Farm Show entry and prize slips taped to it.

"I like to garden and can," she

Ice Cream At 1932 Farm Show Never Tasted Better

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — During the Great Depression in 1932, David Semmel was lucky enough to attend the Pennsylvania Farm Show. He remembers when a vendor held out an ice cream cone to entice passers-by to spend a nickel. The advertising gimmick looked so tempting to 6-year-old David, who couldn't resist licking the cone as he passed by.

"I don't know who was more shocked—my parents or the vendor," said Semmel, who is 72 years old. Fortunately, his great uncle dug into his pocket for a nickle to pay for the cone.

Since then, Semmel has often visited the Farm Show as a 4-H'er, as a farmer, accompanied by FFA students when he served on the school board, and as a retired person. The complex has grown larger, the scheduled events more intense, but the sights, sounds, smells, and the taste of that ice cream cone at the first Farm Show he attended remain a vivid memory.

Semmel's father had sent some vegetables in advance of the show for judging, but when the Semmels arrived, they couldn't find the vegetables. Because it was during the Depression, Semmel presumes "some hungry people made use of them along the way."

Semmel was fascinated by the steel wheels, threshing machines, grain binders, horse-drawn planters, cultivators, grass mowers, and even the hand tools on display.

Hoping to sit awhile, the family searched for a seat in the small arena, but the seats were filled.

"What we call the large arena was not constructed until later, about 1937," Semmel said.

After the large arena was constructed, Semmel said of the event, "I can still hear the sounds of the roosters—each trying to outdo each other."

This year no sounds and sights of exotic birds or poultry will be at the Farm Show because of the ban from avian influenza.

Semmel also laments the loss of the big machinery displays.

Farm Show was always the place to hear and see new wonders of the mechanical age. One year, Semmel was amazed to hear that Allis Chalmers was experiementing with producing a battery-operated tractor. "But we never heard anything after that," Semmel said.

Farm Show is almost always accompanied by weather-related horror stories of getting to and from Harrisburg. Although Semmel doesn't remember having snow-covered roads on the trip from Allentown to the Farm Show when he was only six, he does recall that they drove in a 1929 Chevrolet, with no heater or defrosters, tires that were not too reliable, and at an average speed of 30 to 35 miles an hour.

"My father remarked about the few cars and trucks on the road, but this was when many people had their cars setting on blocks, not having enough money to pay for a license, let alone gasoline and tires. In fact, some people got a license for six months from July through December, at half fee rather than the full year for $10," said Semmel, who is a noted historian.

The Semmels stand next to the original stone house (at left) on the property that is believed to have been built before the Revolutionary War. In the background is the house, built in 1842, where the Semmels live.

While there weren't many cars on the road for that initial journey, later trips involved "horrible traffic" on the old Route 22 bypass. Hopes that the new Route 81 would alleviate the jam-ups were dashed when "traffic backed up pass the exits making travel really dangerous."

In the 1950s, Semmel recalls leaving the Farm Show complex during a heavy snow storm. At one point his carload reached the top of a long hill only to have the car spin around and take them back down the hill.

Semmel and his wife Mary live on the 75-acre farm that his grandfather purchased in 1906. The original part of their 10-room house was built in 1842.

"In 1915, my grandfather added a bathroom and running water that was pumped with a gasoline engine," Semmel said.

Semmel's father was a blacksmith. It was in the blacksmith shop that Semmel was regaled by tales of the past. His interest in history was piqued and no doubt influenced him to begin his collection of antique tractors, cars, and gas engines.

In 1947, Semmel married and began farming in partnership with his dad and later his brother. In 1949, he and Mary moved on the farm, where they raised two daughters and a son. They now have five grandchildren.

He did general farming until 1960. "This was potato country," Semmel said of the farmland.

Dave and Mary Semmel dress in garb typical of the era when they display their antique tractors, cars, and gas engines at the Kutztown Pennsylvania German Festival.

"My father always said that if the plowing is poor, that's the first thing against a good potato crop. Semmel's diligence in plowing a straight row paid off, for he won numerous county plowing contests and the state plowing contest in 1956.

Plowing wasn't his only field of expertise. In 1953 Semmel won the state public speaking contest sponsored by the Pennsylvania Farmer's Association (now Farm Bureau) and went to Chicago to compete in the national convention, "where I got beat out by some guy studying to be a lawyer," Semmel said.

Although the soil was great for raising potatoes, it was too stony for the mechanical potato pickers, and Semmel reluctantly discontinued potato growing.

When his brother graduated from Penn State and convinced his dad to install a dairy operation, Semmel continued grain farming on the side and worked in the engineering department for the Lehigh County Authority until his retirement.

Semmel has a large collection of antique cars, tractors, and gas engines. He purchased his first vehicle in 1957. He and his wife often display their collection of gas engines and antique vehicles at places such as the Kutztown Pennsylvania German Festival.

"I never collect vehicles with the idea of making money. I just buy what I like," said Semmel, who has purchased a 1925 car and a 1926 truck, which commerate the birth years of he and his wife. When he purchased the truck for $25 to save it from the junk pile, he didn't envision that it would now be worth $6,000-$7,000.

The Semmels drive the vehicles to antique car conventions such as the one held annually in Hershey. But Semmel believes that he and his wife will not be able to attend the shows indefinitely and he is in the process of distributing his collection to his children and grandchildren.

In 1986, Semmel and Sterling Zimmerman started the Antique engine, tractor, and toy club. From the first meeting with 17 members it has grown to more than 500 members. Semmel continues to serve as secretary and treasurer of the club.

"We are comfortably retired in our 10-room house until I look around at all the outside buildings and think of all the upkeep that needs to be done, then I get uncomfortable," Semmel said.

"If I had to go out and start farming, I'd need to learn all over again," he said of the need to be licensed for chemical usage and the computerization of machinery.

The sights, sounds, and smells of the Farm Show continue to fascinate Semmel, but he won't be able to attend this year because of a bad knee. Instead, Semmel will spend the week doing what he does most weeks: He writes a bi-weekly column "Lore & More," for the "Parkland Press" about local historical events, and is compiling all the tools required for blacksmithing to donate to the Kutztown Pa. German Heritage Center of which he is a board member.

A bad knee will keep Dave Semmel from attending the Pennsylvania Farm Show this year, but it will not prevent him from remembering Farm Shows past. Considered an archivist, Semmel spends his day compiling historical accounts of the area. He wrote a church history book, writes a column for the local paper, and collects antique tools, tractors, vehicles, and gas engines. In the background is a photograph of the steam engines that Semmel collects. His son Dalton, left, collects antique toy tractors.

says, turning a pint jar filled with a variety of vegetables. "This is a good way to use up vegetables at the end of the season."

In addition to eating fresh, Virginia stores potatoes and onions, cans greenbeans, red beets, freezes lima beans and broccoli, and pickled cucumbers with dill. She grows cabbage, swee corn, and tomatoes. This year, she's added "Long Keeper" tomatoes. She also make applesauce and bakes pies from apples grown on the farm.

"I should grow garlic. I've gotten organic gardening magazines, but don't always get to read them," Virginia says, adding that her brother from Florida stops by each summer to help with the potatoes. "I always grow more than I need, to give away. The girls come in the summer to help."

Virginia and Nelson's daughter, Carol Hobbs, lives in Virginia, while daughter Barbara Vogt lives in Alabama. Barbara paints and papers a room for her mother every summer. Both girls say their mother does too much.

"I grow pumpkins, and gourds, too. I said I'd grow the gourds if someone else decorates them," Virginia says. "My sister-in-law, Ethel Smith, and Shirley Aurand, help make some into birdhouses. They're good sellers at the bazaar. We made egg-shaped gourds into snowmen. With gourds, you never know what you're going to get."

Virginia also delivers church bulletins to shut-ins, is secretary in the Junior Department at Ellen Chapel Church, and likes to knit and sew. Although the energy from her petite body seems endless, she modestly says she has slowed down considerably.

"I'm not a big eater. It keeps me busy filling everyone else up. I'm just glad I have good health, and I feel needed."

Brubakers Recall 70 Years Of Farm Shows

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — People worry about traveling to the Farm Show during bad weather. But that is nothing compared to the way things used to be.

Roy and his wife Martha Jane (Reist) remember attending the event when the exhibits were housed in various buildings around town.

"The handicap of typical Farm Show snow storms was not limited to getting to Harrisburg and home again, but from getting to one part of the exhibition to another," Brubaker said.

Martha said that she remembers showing a 4-H baby beef in the 1920s before the complex was built. The exhibitors slept in dormitories some distance away.

The Brubakers remember reading about the building that was to be erected to house the annual event. "When we read about the size and scope of this building monster, it seemed bigger than any I had ever been in, and probably was," Brubaker said. "It was very exciting to attend what was thought to be the largest farm exhibition under one roof in the nation."

That was before the large arena was added some years later.

As a FFA student at West Lampeter High School, Brubaker remembers helping design an educational window display for the week.

After high school, Brubaker went to work for his brother, L.H. Brubaker, in the Allis-Chalmers farm equipment business. Like other manufacturers, Allis-Chalmers set up a display and dealers and salesmen came to talk.

Business was brisk—and tough. "Farmers would visit all the major equipment displays and 'dicker' for the best price before placing an order for a tractor, combine, or other equipment," Brubaker said.

With such stiff competition

(Turn to Page B18)

Roy and Martha Jane Brubaker have attended all but one or two of the Pennsylvania Farm Shows held the past 70 years. They talk about the changes and plan to attend. "Like the past 50 years, I'll take the map for the Lancaster Farming along to find my way around," Brubaker said.

'People You Meet Are The Good Part Of Showing'

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

WINDHAM CENTER (Bradford Co.) — Neither sleet nor snow nor falling rain can keep the Powell family from the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Traveling to Harrisburg for the week, which is often marked by fierce Northeast winter storms, is a family tradition that started in the 1930s.

"Last year they let us out early because they were calling for a huge storm," remarked Doris Powell, of Powell Rambouillets. "We got to within an hour of home and the roads turned to a sheet of ice. We were stuck there for over an hour."

Doris is carrying on a legacy that was begun by her father, Kenneth Moore, of Twin Pine Farm.

"I showed there about 50 years," said Moore about the Pennsylvania Farm Show. "The first show I showed at was in 1936."

And in his many years of showing and in the years since, he has seen numerous changes. The biggest, perhaps is the ease with which the trip is made.

"We had no heater in the truck. I'd wrap my legs in blankets. You could only go about 35 miles per hour with the truck," Moore recalled. "It would take us about a half a day to get there. At the show we'd sleep in the barn."

Today with improvements in roadways and transportation in general, the family, who lives only one mile from the New York border, can zip to Harrisburg in only three and a half hours.

But they also make it a point to travel to other shows as well. This year they took in the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival, the Troy Fair, the Harford Fair, Keystone International Livestock Exposition, Eastern States Exposition, North American International Livestock Exposition, and the Midwest Stud Ram Sale.

At the peak of his showmanship, Moore traveled to as many as 16 fairs each year exhibiting 50 to 60 head in four breeds. In 1991 he had the National Champion Shropshire ewe.

"It's been a way of life around here as long as I can remember," said Doris.

Moore passed his love of shepherding on to each of his three children. Kenneth Jr. has his own flock about two miles from the home farm. Sister Kathy helps with the flock whenever she's needed. Sister Doris manages Powell Rambouillets with the help of Greg Strausbaugh and sons Rich and Geoff.

Even though Moore no longer shows his sheep, he still keeps a flock of his own. Powell Rambouillets are also housed on his farm.

Currently the Powell flock numbers about 100 including about 50 brood ewes. Not too long ago, their flock numbered more than 250 head, including three breeds.

"We had Shropshires and Dorsets and Rambouillets," said Doris. "Last year we sold the Dorsets and the Shropshires. When I was a 4-H member, I showed Shropshires because my mother and father had Shropshires and Hampshires and Rambouillets. I got elected to have Shropshires."

This spring ewe lamb and fall ram lamb are both destined to be shown at the 1998 Pennsylvania Farm Show. Here, Doris and Geoff Powell stand by as Rich Powell holds the ewe and Greg Strausbaugh holds Powell 9660.

The decision to focus on only one breed came mainly because of time limits. Greg works full time as a grain buyer for Cooperative Feed Dealers in Binghamton, N.Y. and both Rich and Geoff, both out of 4-H, have full time jobs. That left Doris to care for the entire flock mostly by herself, so the numbers were cut back.

Rambouillets became the breed of choice.

Much of the flock stems from Cunningham bloodlines.

"We found this group of Rambouillet ewes up country. When we went to look at the ewes, we weren't going to buy any sheep. We had the Dorsetts and a few Rambouillets and the Shropshires at the time and we didn't need any more sheep around here. We went to look at the sheep and about 10 minutes later, we decided to bring them home," said Greg with a laugh.

"He looked at me and I looked at him and we said, we'll take them," said Doris. "They were that good."

This group came to Pennsylvania in the spring of 1994.

"The Cunningham sheep themselves are from Oregon. They're within one building, the atmosphere was not always the most friendly among competitive salesmen.

Today most major manufacturers take their equipment to Ag Progress Days and other events where they can actually demonstrate equipment instead of simply talking about it.

While Brubaker misses seeing all the farm equipment representatives, he recognizes that some things need to change.

"Today the Farm Show is geared more as a place to show consumers the variety and quality of Pennsylvania farm products instead of a place mostly for farmers.

"I guess that's good," said Brubaker. "They need to know that it is possible for about three percent of the work force to produce more than enough food for our expanding population. Agriculture is still the most important industry in the state."

The Brubakers have attended all but one or two of the shows held during the last 70 years. During the war years, the Farm Show building was not available to hold the event.

"First, I went with my parents, then as part of my employment, and later we took our children and grandchildren," he said.

Although the incentive to attend changed, Brubaker can't stay away. He said, "I'll probably be there to check out new technologies along with tens of thousands of other consumers, and enjoy the fresh, nutritious, delicious produce in the food court."

After all these years, Brubaker probably knows his way around the complex better than most; however, he said, "Like the other 50 years, I'll take the map along from Lancaster Farming to find my way around."

Flexibility is the key to staying productive. And that's exactly what you'll get with the AGCO® Allis 5650 utility tractor.

Its low height and low center of gravity make this the ideal tractor for working inside buildings and other confined work areas. And because the platform is low to the ground, it's easy to get on and off the tractor.

- The synchromesh transmission has 12 forward and 12 reverse speed choices, with synchronized shifting in four gears and a synchronized forward/reverse shuttle.
- These directional changes help to reduce loader and rear blade cycle times.
- The AWD models feature a true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance.
- As always, behind every AGCO Allis tractor lies a 4-year/ 4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer.

running probably about five to 7,000 ewes out there, I would guess," said Greg.

What do the Powells look for in a Rambouillet?

"The Rambouillet is a wool sheep, and they are supposed to have fine fleeces," said Greg. "We try to work to get fine, uniform fleeces. More and more people are getting their fleeces uniform, but not necessarily fine anymore. So we're real critical especially on the rams that we use, that they have the type of fleece that we're looking for."

Size is also important as well as muscling and good feet and legs.

"I don't know if you can say 'the bigger the better,' but it's gone that way," commented Greg, " as long as you don't run into a lot of other problems."

On the show circuit, the Powell and Strausbaugh names are not new. Sheep breeders might recall the Powell name from last year's Farm Show where the family took home both the premier breeder and premier exhibitor banners in the Rambouillet show. They also had the supreme champion ram of the wool breeds as well as the supreme champion sheep.

That ram, Powell 9551, was sold to Colleen and Jimmy Horn of Ben Bolt, Texas this fall after being named the champion at the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival and the champion at Eastern States Exposition.

A long list of Farm Show awards went to the family's other sheep as well, including first and second yearling ewe, first and second fall ewe lamb, first and second spring ewe lamb, first pair of ewe lambs, first pen of lambs, and first breeder's young flock.

Greg's son, Jeff, had the grand champion market lamb at the 1987 Pennsylvania Farm Show.

In other shows last summer, the Powells also tasted success with a spring ram lamb in natural color.

(Turn to Page B21)

From left, Greg, Kenneth, Rich, and Doris gather around Geoff, who holds the family's black ram. Although the ram has won many awards in his short life, he will not be making the trip to Harrisburg this January because there are no classes for natural color sheep.

Kenneth Moore has been raising and showing sheep almost all of his life. He made his first trip to the Pennsylvania Farm Show in 1936. Here he holds one of the Rambouillet lambs that are housed on his farm.

Tracy Family Keeps Their Fingers Crossed

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Like hundreds of other exhibitors, Ryan and John Tracy are hoping to take top ribbons at the Pennsylvania Farm Show during the next few days. The two brothers each have a market lamb and a carcass lamb to enter in competition. They will also participate in showmanship.

"No matter how good the sheep look," their dad said, "we always keep our fingers crossed."

Last year, one week before Farm Show, 13 of the Tracys' sheep were killed by stray dogs. The dogs were not tracked down. A woodlot with hundreds of acres lies adjacent to the sheep barn.

A month after the attack, the Tracys purchased a donkey. Donkeys are said to be aggressive in scaring off dogs.

"We haven't had any trouble since then," Tracy said. "I don't know if it's because of the donkey or a coincidence."

If the Tracy name has a familiar ring, it may be because Ryan's and John's 22-year-old brother Mark has been showing sheep since he was six years old. Although Mark is no longer eligible to compete, his interest in sheep is intact. Home from college for the holidays, Mark said, "I like to see how the lambs progress and I like to watch competitions."

Mark is enrolled at Penn State main campus studying animal science, but is considering switching to art education.

All three brothers have left a significant mark on showing at the local level. It's tougher at state competition, but Mark showed the middleweight champion, a lightweight reserve champion, and the Southdown junior breeding sheep champion twice.

For Mark, it was the showmanship competition that he preferred.

"I like the challenge," Mark said. Although he never took champion honors, he was happy to end up in the top five placings.

Mark has participated in many roles in the 4-H program. He worked as a summer intern in the Lancaster County 4-H office and was a state representative for 4-H ag business sponsored by Purina Mills.

To achieve the appointment by Purina State, Mark had to compete in a county-wide and in state competitions involving essays and interviews.

Mark met with ag industry leaders to discuss ag as a whole. He especially enjoyed learnign about motivational techniques and plant and animal genetics and biotechnology.

"Every paper I wrote at college was about genetic engineering and biotechnology," he said.

Mark's brother Ryan will be joining him at Penn State in the fall. Ryan plans to study landscape architecture.

John is in the seventh grade at Elizabethtown Middle School.

Parents Helen and Gerald Tracy are staunch supporters of their sons' 4-H involvement. Helen serves as prime chauffeur, cheering section, and helps during lambing season.

Growing up Tracy was a 4-H member in York County where he participated in beef and swine clubs. It wasn't until after he was married and bought a few sheep that his interest in the breed was kindled.

In 1980, when the Tracys moved from Centre County to the Elizabethtown area, they had 60 ewes. The flock peaked in 1982 with 90-100 ewes, but has since been reduced to 30-35 head.

Mark began showing in open shows before he was old enough to participate in 4-H. At his first competition, he showed the supreme champion over all animals at the Elizabethtown Fair. This amazing feat was duplicated by brother Ryan in 1992.

When the Tracys first moved into the county, Tracy was farm manager for Masonic Homes, a long term health care and retirement facility for Masonic Lodge masons and their families.

With 1,405 acres, Tracy oversees the farm crop program, dairy, beef, swine, and orchard operations. Since then, Tracy has been appointed director of environmental services and land manager. In addition to the farm operation, Tracy also oversees housekeeping, healthcare, and more than 900 staff people.

Of the beauty of the grounds and the opportunities of Masonic Homes, Tracy said, "The worse day I ever had here is better than the best day I ever had working elsewhere."

Although the Tracys live on the grounds, they keep their livestock at their 40-acre farm located one mile from their home.

In addition to breeding sheep for their own use, the Tracys also sell sheep to other 4-H members.

Although they generally show the sheep they breed, at times they purchase some if they don't have the right lamb size and weight for competitions.

"We try to gear the sheep to peak at the right time, but sometimes it doesn't work out," Tracy said.

"We have had equal success with home-bred and purchased sheep," Tracy said. "Both were homebred lambs that won their classes at Farm Show last year."

The Tracys noted they don't have any trade secrets to share about raising lambs. "We weigh routinely to monitor and adjust weight. We use a basic corn ration, feed oats if too fat, and add corn if not finished."

Several weeks before a show, the sheep are given added exercise to firm them up.

In 1980, Mark showed the middleweight champion in market lamb competition at Farm Show. In 1990, Mark showed the reserve champion at Farm Show, and the following year the champion. In 1997, each of the brothers had a first in the class.

In 1993, Ryan was the novice showmanship winner. In 1991 he showed the champion lightweight market lamb.

This year has been a great year for John. He showed the 4-H Roundup market lamb champion and with the same lamb at Elizabethtown Fair took the reserve champion sale lamb title.

Naturally as the youngest of three brothers, John wants to do as well or outdo his brothers' accomplishments. He said, "I really want to get supreme champion at E-town," he said.

"Four-H was a good experience for me," Tracy said. It was his 4-H experience that prompted him to go to college and pursue an agricultural career. Tracy continues to participate by serving as a 4-H leader in the county Woolies Club.

"The county 4-H has a fantastic program. I can't say enough good about Chet (Hughes), livestock agent, and the excellent extension staff," Tracy said.

His three sons are also members of Demolay, a Masonic youth fraternity that provides recreational and community activities. All three have served as altar boys and participated in either soccer or football.

Ryan traded soccer for football when he was in 10th grade. He Gerald is both dad and 4-H leader for sons gives Ryan and John. Here, he gives them some pointers while they prepare their sheep for Farm Show competition. In the background are the Angus and Shorthorn steers they raise.

In addition to showing sheep, the brothers share artistic talent.

National Watermelon Promotion Board Issues Call For Production Research Proposals

ORLANDO, Fla. — The National Watermelon Promotion Board continues to expand its production research program in 1998 by issuing a call for research proposals addressing production issues that would benefit the watermelon industry on a national level.

The board is requesting proposals by Jan. 24 and has slated $40,000 to fund projects selected by the NWPB Research Evaluation Committee, comprised of watermelon producers, handlers, and importers.

Scientists may propose projects with short-term results or long-term goals, as long as the benefits are applicable to the entire watermelon industry. All proposals should include the economic impact and geographic scope of the proposed research.

"We're searching for research projects that would help find solutions to disease problems that have caused significant crop losses for growers throughout the country," said NWPB Executive Director William Watson.

The nonprofit NWPB is funded by watermelon producers, shippers, and handlers whose assessments support a variety of research, promotion, and educational programs.

NWPB President Percy Bunch said the production research directly benefits watermelon growers. "I think production research has enabled the National Watermelon Promotion Board to take giant steps forward in building relationships with growers," said Bunch. "The research gives growers satisfaction that their assessed money is being used to benefit them in growing melons."

Three watermelon production research projects were launched in 1997 with $12,500 in NWPB funding. A newly created NWPB Research Evaluation Committee selected three proposals designed to combat three destructive watermelon diseases. North Carolina State University scientists started screening and testing various watermelon varieties and breeding lines for resistance of Papaya Ringspot Virus, also known as Watermelon Mosaic Virus-1, while University of Florida scientists began working to develop watermelon varieties resistant to Watermelon Mosaic Virus-2. In addition, scientists from Texas A & M University have begun establishing a Fusarium Wilt Disease Nursery in Overton, Texas, to screen commercial varieties and breeding lines for wilt resistance.

Research proposals should be a maximum of five typewritten pages and must include a two-page CV and list of publications for each investigator included in the proposal. Scientists should send 11 copies of the proposal by Jan. 24 to: NWPB Research Evaluation Committee, Attention: NWPB Executive Director William Watson, P.O. Box 140065, Orlando, FL 32814-0065.

"We had a black lamb this year out of a white mother and a white father. He was super good from the time he was born," said Doris. "We took him to the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival when he was 10 weeks old. We took him not necessarily to win, because we knew he was going to be too young, but he won. Then we took him to the Troy Fair, and he was the supreme champion ram. Then we had him at Eastern States and he was only third and we took him to Louisville and he was first spring ram and reserve champion ram down there."

Natural colored sheep are becoming more and more popular, but on the Powell and Moore farms, they have not been plentiful.

"Dad has raised Rambouillets for 70 years and we've had three black lambs," said Doris.

Years ago no one talked about black lambs. Now people are looking for them.

"We had one in the 80s and it was when people were just starting to talk about natural colored sheep," said Doris, "and my mother was going to keep it. She was thinking, it's worth meat price which might have been $50 at the time and so she asked like a couple hundred dollars, because she wanted to keep it, and the people said, 'we'll take it!'"

Because of the fine fleece of the Rambouillet, buyers usually pay premium prices. The Powells have marketed their fleeces through wool cooperatives as well as individually. This winter, they plan to branch into another market; that of selling yarn made from the fleece of their Rambouillets.

"We're going to take it to the woolen mill and have it processed into yarn. Then we'll try to sell the yarn," said Doris.

If the marketing proves successful, they will continue to market their fleece as yarn, adding a new dimension to their farm enterprise.

Regardless of how the newest venture turns out, the family will always share a love of sheep and shepherding and will cherish the memories and friendships that have been created along the way.

"The people you meet are the good part of showing anything," said Moore.

Farm Safety 4 Just Kids

Prior to the establishment of Farm Safety 4 Just Kids, a study by the Harborview Injury Prevention and Research Center estimated that 300 children and adolescents were dying each year from farm injuries, and that another 23,500 were suffering nonfatal trauma. An update of that study now indicates that the farm fatality rate for children and adolescents has declined by 39 percent.

With the help of Cargill Hybrid Seeds and other corporate sponsors, Farm Safety 4 Just Kids is celebrating its 10th year of advocating the prevention of farm-related childhood injuries, health risks and fatalities. Through educational programs and a large network of grassroots volunteers this nonprofit organization is leading the way to a safer future for the children of today's farming communities.

Cookbook Available At Grange Farm Show Booth

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – For 125 years, the members of the Pennsylvania State Grange have fulfilled the mission of making Pennsylvania a better place to live through community service work and participation in legislative affairs at the local, county, state, and federal levels.

During that time, individuals who have purchased Grange cookbooks have helped Grangers accomplish that mission.

Now, as the Grange celebrates its anniversary in 1998, the organization has released a new cookbook to commemorate the occasion. Grange cookbooks will be available at the Grange's Farm Show booth, located in the Main Exhibit Building near the Maclay Street entrance.

"The accomplishments of the Grange speak for themselves," James C. Mentzer, public relations director of the Pennsylvania State Grange, said, "as do the recipes that fill our cookbooks. Pennsylvania State Grange cookbooks are truly legendary in many kitchens around the world."

A hallmark of Grange cookbooks is their versatility.

"A cook has a complete menu in this cookbook," Becky Michalka, women's activities director, said. "From the first course to the last, the possibilities are endless. No matter your taste, you will find a recipe to satisfy your sweet tooth or please your palate."

Michalka said the anniversary cookbook recipes have also passed the test of time.

"These are recipes that are made in Grange member's kitchens and tested by Grange families," Michalka said. "And, the recipes in this cookbook contain ingredients that are typically found in most homes."

The anniversary cookbook is also very accessible-and educational.

"Alphabetized sections from A to Z, a table of contents and an index make this 488-page cookbook ideal for cooks who are on the go," Michalka said. "We also included four pages of information relevant to people who are concerned about leading a healthy lifestyle, and to raise awareness among those who may not be as concerned about their health, but should be."

Michalka said there is a section dedicated to saturated fats and oils, a cholesterol content chart, which includes information about total fat in grams, and definitions of food labeling terminology.

The Grange has four other cookbooks and each is quite successful.

The 1984 (red) edition, and the 1972 (white), were recently reprinted due to customer demand. Other Grange cookbooks, include: the 1925 green hardbound, which sells for $9; and the 1992 green softbound. Grange cookbooks, except the 1925 edition, sell for $13 each. There is also a $3 shipping/handling charge on all books.

They can be ordered by sending the appropriate funds to the Pennsylvania State Grange, 1604 N. Second St., Harrisburg, PA 17102, or by contacting a local Grange member. For more information, call the state office in Harrisburg at 1-800-552-3865. The Pennsylvania State Grange has over 30,000 members and is a rural, agricultural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of Pennsylvanians.

plays on the defensive end and has had lots of playing time this season. For the past threes years, Ryan has also participated in the school's Lacrosse team and works with a local landscaping business.

John also plays soccer and lacrosse. But his most outstanding acomplishment was participating in Odyssey of the Mind. Schools hand-pick highly motivated and gifted students to participate in the event. John's team won state and regional competitions and went on to represent the state of Pennsylvania in world competition.

"It was like a mini-olympics. Team members wear identical T-shirts and caps and need to solve problems by using creative solutions. This year, the world Odyssey of the Mind was held at the University of Maryland. John's team was given $100 to make a car and trailer. They spent one night a week working on the project from November through March.

Projects are judged on creative solving, engineering, and presentation. In addition, at the world competition, members were given a spontaneous problem to solve. The team place 13th out of 64 teams.

All three of the brothers were or are in the school's gifted program, on the school's honor roll, and all are artistic. John likes to draw cartoons and puts surprising twists on them. Ryan sketches outdoors scenes and computer assisted architectual drawing.

The Tracys also raise beef cattle and Shorthorns on their farm, but do not show them.

Veal Industry Makes Changes

Veal. Eat smart. Eat well.

Veal industry leaders recently kicked off two brand new NCBA initiatives at Veal Summit meetings held in Philadelphia and Chicago Those initiatives include the exciting new veal tagline and logo, as well as updates for several new and on-going aggressive marketing programs

The tagline, "Veal. Eat Smart. Eat Well" Positions veal as a versatile, great tasting meat as well as a nutritious dietary choice The combined message reinforces the existing perceptions of veal as a tasty, nutrition-wise indulgence to consumers and foodservice professionals The tagline will be featured on retail packaging, advertising and circulars, retail point-of-sale materials, recipe cards as well as in foodservice advertising and collateral

Thanks go to several state beef councils, including Pennsylvania, who have contributed funding for a new culinary brochure The veal industry will benefit from a new culinary school brochure that will include detailed cooking methods, cut charts and virtually anything a chef, culinary student or distributor sales representative would need to know about veal Work on the brochure is now underway and will be a valuable training tool

In Pennsylvania a veal cook-off challenge for culinary students is being planned for this spring, veal demos sampling in area supermarkets for the summer months and the second annual Veal 101 class for industry suppliers this fall If you have any questions concerning PA veal programs please contact Alexa Kroutch, Veal Programs Director at the PA Beef Council office at (800) 572-2020.

Happier Holidays

Holidays are associated with families and food People enjoy getting together and swapping stories over great meals Beef checkoff funds help increase interest in beef over the holidays by providing recipe ideas to food editors

One such effort resulted in articles in more than sixteen hundred publications, such as Good Housekeeping and Ladies Home Journal In 1997 placements were made in publications reaching 1 24 billion homes Through food communications, checkoff dollars help increase beef demand

Planting Seeds of Demand

In farming you've got to plant the seed to reap the reward It's the same with beef demand, with seeds reminding consumers that beef is what they really want when it's time to eat

Not a month will go by this year without commercials appearing on television The emotional approach capitalizes on the consumer's love for beef, and will reach 87 percent of adults ages 25-54 an average of 14 times during the year Thanks to the beef checkoff, that's a total of 101 million people who will be reminded regularly that beef is what they want

BEEF

From steakhouses to the family table, beef is once again tempting Americans' tastebuds Capitalizing on consumer's craving for beef both at home and in restaurants, the beef industry is launching a new advertising campaign Featuring the tagline "Beef It's What You Want," four new spots began airing on national television August 4

"Beef It's What You Want ' gets to the heart of people's inherent passion for beef," explains Dave Ivan, executive director of advertising and marketing services for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association "These ads get to the emotional level of eating beef while our previous campaign focused on the functional aspect of meal planning and preparation The new ads demonstrate beef's popularity in home settings as well as restaurants, especially in places like steakhouses, which continue to boom "

Using humorous vignettes, the four 30-second ads spot-light situations in which consumers give in to their beef cravings One spot, called "Meteor," shows one man's desperate attempt to grill up his last meal, a steak, after he spots a meteor hurtling toward Earth

Two other ads "Soaps" and "What's Possible," reveal people longing for beef A fourth spot, "Star," exposes a lonely rotisserie chicken's desire to become as exciting and sought-after as the more popular steak All of the commercials end with the last chords of Aaron Copland's "Rodeo" music, featured in the previous "Beef It's What's for Dinner " spots

The commercials will air nationally on prime-time, daytime, early morning syndication, early morning, cable networks and sports programming The campaign is scheduled to run through September 1998 It will be supported by local radio advertising sponsoring by most of the 44 state beef councils

According to Eorgoff, the new ads are part of the industry's overall initiative to operate more like a branded product Other new marketing initiatives include a category management program for retail and an award for the best new branded beef product at foodservice or retail

The "Beef It's What You Want " campaign and other beef promotion programs are funded by beef producers around the nation

(NAPS)—Contrary to popular belief, it's not necessary to have the kids say "Cheese" when you want to capture that perfect photo So says Brian Miller, Director of Marketing for Samsung cameras Lining up the kids and asking them to say "Cheese," more than likely, will give you a shot of a goofy smile with lots of teeth

"Some of the best photos tend to be 'candid' photos, when the subject is unsuspecting," said Miller. But how do you get an unposed informal photograph? Samsung camera offers these five tips

• Always keep your camera in an accessible place, such as a bookcase in the living room as opposed to a drawer in an upstairs bedroom

• Always make sure it is loaded with film and that the battery is active

• If you see a situation where you feel like saying. "Isn't that cute"—that's the time to quietly reach for the camera.

• Position yourself on the same level as the subject so that you'll be able to capture the facial expression For example, if the child is opening a gift, you'll want to capture the expression just as the child discovers the contents.

• Call out the person's name In order to get a great unsuspecting shot of a child playing with a pet or a toy, simply call the child's name and the natural instinct will be for the child to look up and towards you. Snap! The perfect photo.

"While posed family portrait photos are important and should not be underestimated, candid shots are the ones that tend to bring out that natural beauty of the subject," said Miller "How many times have you used your video camera to capture a scene of an unsuspecting child playing? As soon as the subject knows you're taking the video, the entire scenario changes and the 'naturalness' disappears. The same is true when it comes to taking still photographs," Miller said

KUBOTA DEFIES THE LAW OF AVERAGES

Kubota engineers defied all the laws of "average" when they designed Kubota's Grand L and M-Series diesel tractors. Loaded with features, these versatile tractors can tackle your toughest farming tasks.

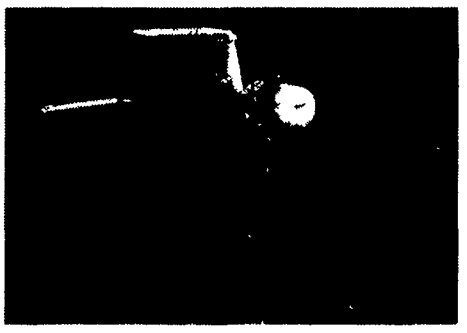
The 2WD and 4WD Grand L-Series generates 25 to 37 PTO horsepower in four compact, state-of-the-art models.

Shift-on-the-go with Kubota's Synchro-shuttle transmission, or choose a GST (Glide Shift Transmission) for 8 speed clutchless operation.

Kubota's M-Series increases your power with two models producing 42 to 50 PTO horsepower. The M-Series 4WD models incorporate Kubota's bevel gear drive for smooth, tight turns.

Both the Grand L and M-Series are powered by Kubota's low noise and vibration E-TVCS diesel engines. These easy maintenance diesels are lean on both fuel and emissions, and are also environmentally friendly. Independent rear PTO and hefty 3-point hitch is standard.

See your Kubota dealer today and let them show you why Kubota's Grand L and M-Series are not your "average" tractor!



Kubota Tractor Corporation markets a full line of tractors through a nationwide network of over 1,000 dealers Financing is available through Kubota Credit Corporation

Advanced Agronomics Sets Meeting

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Growers who want crop problems solved can discover how technology can increase profits at a meeting on Friday, Jan. 23 at 12:30 p.m. at the Marvin Zook Farm on Limeville Road in Gap.

The meeting, hosted by Advanced Agronomics, is scheduled to examine cropping programs that show the grower how to reduce the impact of weather stress on crops, how to improve the genetic potential of cropping systems, and other items.

Pesticide credits will be provided (two core and two category). Reservations are encouraged but not required and door prizes will be awarded.

Disk Harrow Has Heavy-Duty Elements

RACINE, Wis. – Case Corporation, the world's largest manufacturer of disk harrows, announces the introduction of the Case IH 3850 tandem disk harrow, a new, midsize model that replaces the popular Case IH 3800 disk harrow.

"The 3850 retains all the strengths of the 3800, but it has heavy-duty elements added throughout," said Keith Whitaker, tillage systems marketing manager. "This makes the 3850 stronger, more durable, and better suited for handling tough soil conditions."

As with all Case IH disk harrows, a key feature is the 3850's shallow concavity blades. The term, Whitaker explained, refers to the shape of the blades. "Shallow concavity, crimp-center blades provide better soil penetration, with less weight," he said. "This way, yield aren't adversely affected by increased soil compaction due to higher working weights. The disk pulls easier, requiring less horsepower and fuel, due to shallow concavity blades."

In addition, these Case IH Earth Metal® disk blades are 30 percent stronger and have 20 percent longer life than earlier blades, he reports.

Other 3850 advantages:

•The gang angle is adjustable, allowing the user to customize machine operation for more or less residue coverage.

The Case IH 3850 tandem disk harrow is a midsize model that replaces the popular 3800 disk harrow.

•The thickness of wing-gang tubes is increased by 50 percent, which means greater durability. Weld thickness also is increased.

•A fourth rockshaft bearing was added and rockshaft material has been changed to a micro-allow steel, resulting in longer life and a 25 percent increase in strength.

•The hydraulic cylinder rods will be made from NitroSteel® which is more resistant to corrosion. Also, routing and attachment of the hydraulic hoses have been improved for easier setup and longer hose life.

•Larger tires have been added – 15 inches instead of 14 – to improve load-carrying ability, depth control, and flotation.

Customers also will find the 3850's hitch easier to adapt to a variety of tractors. The size of the standard hitch clevis hole had been increased to 1-3/4 inch for greater adaptability.

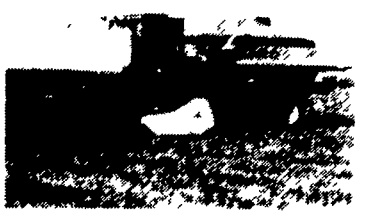
Combines Get Brand New Look

ATLANTA, Ga. – While new upgrades on the Gleaner R-Series rotary combines focus on grain quality, operator comforts and more header options, the silver harvesters are also breaking with 74 years of tradition and getting a new look – a shiny silver metallic paint job on top of the existing galvanized steel finish.

Named the "Silver Series Rotary Combines" the four harvesters – R42, R52, R62, R72 – are being manufactured with more than just new paint.

A new turret unloading system features a longer reach auger with extra clearance height for easier unloading into today's large trucks and grain carts. For faster unloading the dump rate has been boosted to a rapid two bushels per second. And to provide for quick, safe grain sampling, the sample door is conveniently located on the front panel of the grain tank.

Also, according to Jerry Weaver, general marketing manager, Gleaner combines, all new Gleaners are designed to be Fieldstar ready. "They'll be able to accept Agco's new site-specific farming system without any field modifications after delivery," he said.



Named the "Silver Series Rotary Combines" the four harvesters – R42, R52, R62, R72 – are being manufactured with more than just new paint. A new turret unloading system features a longer reach auger with extra clearance height for easier unloading into today's large trucks and grain carts.

Header options for R-Series Gleaners have also been expanded to include new high capacity rigid and flex grain headers, plus specially designed stripper and draper models for small grain crops. The new Hugger corn heads, ranging from 4 to 12 rows, now include setups for 20- and 22-inch narrow rows for yield conscious producers.

The R-Series Gleaners feature exclusive rubber accelerator rolls that rotate in opposite directions to speed grain downward through a high-velocity air blast for pre-cleaning and improved sidehill operation. Another exclusive: a rock door that automatically ejects damaging objects before they can enter the cylinder and concave. This lets the operator run closer to the ground when necessary to gather all the crop.

Gleaner combines are powered by Cummins liquid-cooled diesel engines ranging from 185 to 330 hp. The standard hydrostatic transmission operates with a single forward/reverse lever that permits the operator to vary machine speed in either direction.

Performance, Operator Comfort Highlight Tractors

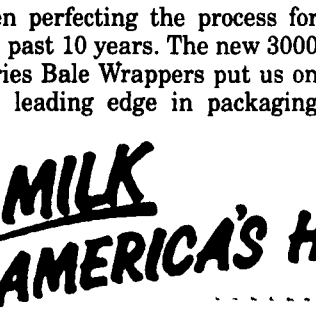
MOLINE, Ill – John Deere has replaced its popular 5000 Series Tractors with the new 5000 TEN Series Tractors, which have major performance and operator convenience enhancements, and attractive new styling resembling John Deere's larger tractor models.

The new TEN Series includes four standard models – the 45-hp 5210, 55-hp 5310, 65-hp 5410, and 75-hp 5510 Tractors – and two narrow models – the 55-hp 5310N and 75-hp 5510N Narrow Tractors.

All of the 5000 TEN Series Tractors are powered by new John Deere PowerTech™ diesel engines that deliver more horsepower and meet EPA, CARB, and EEC off-road emission standards. The 5000 TEN Series Tractors are available in open-station and cab configurations.

Rubber-mounted footrests, laminated steel transmission covers, and sound dampening fenders and transmission control covers improve sound quality and reduce noise on the open-station tractors. All open-station and cab models feature larger mufflers.

The standard models (5210, 5310, 5410, and 5510 Tractors) have improved ergonomic features including a deluxe seat with contoured cushions and retractable seat belts, and contoured transmission control knobs for a more comfortable grip. A new instrument panel on all 5000 TEN Series Tractors provides backlighting for improved night visibility.



The John Deere 5000 Ten Series Tractors feature new power levels from 45 to 75 PTO horsepower and 53 to 87 engine horsepower.

The 5210, 5310, 5410, and 5510 tractors offer a choice of four transmissions, including the standard CollarShift, and the optional SyncShuttle™, SynShuttle™ with 540/540E PTO, and PowrReverser™ transmissions. A SyncReverser™ transmission is standard on the 5310N and 5510N narrow models. All five transmissions are designed to match the power and torque characteristics of the 5000 TEN Series engines. The transmission provides rigid shift linkages for smooth, crisp shifts; constant-mesh, helical gears for quiet, reliable operation; positive park pawl that eliminates the need for a handbrake; and a neutral start switch that required the gear shift lever to be in either park or neutral position to start the engine.

The CollarShift and SyncShuttle transmissions offer nine forward and three reverse speeds. The PowrReverser transmission offers 12 forward and 12 reverse speeds, and wet forward and reserve clutches for maximum durability. The PowrReverser transmission also provides power shift for direction changes, making it ideal for loader and rear-blade applications. The operator can change direction without depressing the clutch pedal, and make synchronized shifts between speeds on-the-go with the use of the clutch.

Vermeer Celebrates 25th With New Product Launch

PELLA, Iowa – It has been described at "the biggest new ag product launch in Vermeer history" and probably the most significant one since vermeer introduced the big round baler in 1972.

To celebrate the company's 25th anniversary, Vermeer plans a huge new product launch.

"You might say we're committed to the hay equipment industry," said Jim VanderWerff, vice president of the ag division. "We introduced more than a dozen new products at the national sales meeting this fall, including a whole new family of balers (the New L-Series Baler line), plus our fist entry into the big square market (with the new Vermeer CommandRAM). All of them are targeted to the hay harvesting market."

He said, "Our goal is to lead the industry as 'The Hay Specialist,' We started it with the invention of the big round baler in 1972. We spearheaded the silage baling revolution in the United States and we've been perfecting the process for the past 10 years. The new 3000 Series Bale Wrappers put us on the leading edge in packaging high-moisture silage bales."

The new big square baler (CommandRAM)—with hydraulic ram "on command" eliminates downtime and high maintenance costs common to mechanically-driven big squares.

According to VanderWerff, the unprecedented new product launch is "the first step in a series of moves designed to take Vermeer to the next level. Another step involves further expansion of Vermeer's retail distributor organization."

Lebanon 4-H Youth Hold Winter Livestock Roundup

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Members of the Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club recently held their annual winter roundup at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

The annual winter roundup is held prior to the Pennsylvania Farm Show, and is used as a warmup event to the Farm Show for some youth, while it is the major winter showing and selling event for others.

Galen Kopp, county Extension dairy and livestock agent, said that members of the county 4-H Livestock Club have indicated they will be showing 36 market hogs, 22 market lambs and 10 market steers at the state Farm Show.

Further, he said that nine members are expected to compete in the Junior Shepherd Contest during the Farm Show (starting 1 p.m., Jan. 12 in the Small Arena of the Harrisburg Farm Show Complex).

The Lebanon Winter Roundup consists of a day of livestock shows followed by a sale. Support from the community was strong, Kopp said.

The sale totalled $8,955. Buyers paid $1,615 for 10 lambs, for an average of $161.50; and $7,340 for 45 market hogs, averaging $163.11.

There were no steers shown or sold.

The judge of the sheep competition was John Eaton, a York County sheep breeder and judge, who has been involved for a number of years with supporting youth programs.

Kyle Fleener, son of Tim and Sarah Fleener of Robesonia showed the grand champion market lamb, a 120-pound crossbred animal that was also the champion heavy weight. Fleener sold the animal to John F. Lengel Oil Co. of Newmanstown for $260.

The reserve grand champion lamb was a 118-pound crossbred animal exhibited by Susan Leed, daughter of Robert and Nancy Leed of Myerstown. It sold to Keystone Farm Credit for $200. Leed also showed the mediumweight champion.

The lightweight champion was a 97-pound Montadale shown by Tisha Ebling, daughter of Warren and Jane Ebling of Newmanstown. Tisha also showed the reserve champion lighweight lamb, another Montadale.

Blair Brown, son of Bill and Rhelda Brown of Hershey, showed the reserve heavyweight champion, a 125-pound crossbred lamb.

Joseph Tice, son of Thomas and Debra Tice of Lebanon, showed the reserve mediumweight champion, a 105-pound animal.

In the market hog competition, the judge was David Holloway of Glen Rock, a locally well-known breeder and judge.

Jon Harnish, son of Guy and Carol Harnish of Lebanon, showed the grand champion market hog, a 265-pound crossbred animal that sold for $290 to Hatfield Quality Meats. That animal was the champion light heavyweight.

Harnish also showed the champion heavyweight and reserve champion heavyweight market hogs.

Tabitha Kohr, daughter of Tim Kohr of Myerstown, showed the reserve grand champion market hog, a 245-pound crossbred animal that sold for $250 to Lebanon Valley National Bank. It was the reserve champion light heavyweight.

Cattle Producers Challenged To Eliminate Select Beef From Production Goals

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — "It's time for the beef cattle industry to accept the fact that USDA Select beef is of little if any use in expanding beef demand in this country," said Dick Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association.

In his regular Angus Journal column, Spader warns that, "No cattle producer should have the goal of producing Select beef, even in small quantities."

Citing the price spreads between USDA Choice and Select, and the even wider spreads between average Choice and above and Select beef, Spader said,"Select cattle are the fall-outs of a feeding program, not the desired end result. They (cattle that grade Select) are cattle without the genetic ability to grade Choice when fed properly."

He reminded cattle producers that in 1975, the year that the USDA marbling standards for the various grades were lowered dramatically, beef held a 55 percent share of the meat market, which has declined steadily since then. "Industry experts now predict that by 2005 beef will hold a scant 25 percent share," he said.

We know how to reverse this trend, Spader said, and make beef more acceptable to consumers. Citing a retail beef loin palatability study conducted in eight American cities, Spader pointed out that steaks from Prime loins produced no undesirable eating experiences. Steaks in the upper two-thirds of the Choice grade produced 5 percent undesirable eating experiences and Select grade loins were 20 percent unsatisfactory.

"Even a five percent failure rate is not good," Spader said, "but a 20 percent failure rate is simply unacceptable. The problem is not that beef is too expensive, the problem is that beef that produces unacceptable eating results is too expensive."

He said that a 1996 retail price study conducted in Chicago showed that at the time Select beef was selling for $4.99 a pound, beef in the upper two-thirds of the Choice grade was selling for $8.99 a pound and Prime was priced at $15.99 a pound. "People not only will pay for quality, they are doing it every day. We must respond positively to these price signals that are more and more being reflected back in prices paid to producers," he said.

"Unfortunately, the beef industry as a whole isn't ready to accept these facts. There are people who still believe that select is a desirable consumer product," Spader said. For these people there is no way to change their minds before 2005, let alone change the genetics in their herds. As a result, the industry must move ahead without them.

"The prospect of beef holding only a 25 percent share of the meat market in seven or eight years is unsettliing and unacceptable," Spader concluded. "Dedication to the production of consistent, high-quality beef, and to effective beef marketing is the only way we can prevent these predictions from becoming a reality."

Tewksbury Reports On New York Task Force

ARDEN TEWKSBURY
Manager of Pro Ag

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — On December 18, 1997, one by one dairy farmers from all sections of New York State went to the podium to inform the members of the New York State Governor's Task Force of the seriousness regarding the financial plight of New York State farmers.

It didn't seem to matter whether the dairymen had 50 cows or 500 cows; the message was still the same; if something isn't done to increase and stabilize milk prices to dairy farmers, then many of these dairymen would be forced out of business. These farmers spoke the same message that thousands of dairy farmers have been exploiting at the same meetings Pro Ag has held since November of 1996. The farmers that attended Pro Ag's meeeting were not radicals, nor were the ones that testified in Syracuse.

However, more importantly; it didn't matter what organizations these dairy farmers belonged to, they all had the same message. The same message that I've listened to altogether too often during the last 15 months.

To me, there appeared to be a solid support for the Northeast Dairy Compact, and a new pricing for milk that will cover the dairy farmers' cost, plus a return on their investment.

We can't change the past, but we sure can change the future. We can't change the fact that some coops and organizations have been dragging their feet on the Northeast Dairy Compact, but we now must work together and give six additional states the opportunity to join. After this happens, then other states may jointly form additional Compacts. We can't change the fact that many people have been willing to accept a milk pricing formula that has cheated dairy farmers out of billions of dollars across the United States.

However, all of us now have the responsibility to develop a pricing formula that is fair to our dairy farmers, without gouging our consumers. This can be done.

We must all strive to have Congress place a floor price under the Basic Formula Price of $14.50 for an indefinite period of time. If we fail to obtain a decent floor price, then unfortunately the predictions of many of the dairy farmers that testified on December 18, 1997 will come true.

In support of the dairy farmers testimony, many feed dealers, implement dealers, etc. went to the podium explaining the difficulty they were having to maintain their businesses as a result of the low, unstable prices paid to dairy farmers. Alarmingly, these are the same remarks that I have heard over and over again during the last 15 months.

The remarks of these business people alone should be enough to warrant quick action for higher prices to our dairy farmers.

However, the most alarming testimony was given by Bob Smith from the Farm Credit System. Farm Credit has done a survey of 11,387 dairy farmers from New England, New York, and Pennsylvania that use the services of Farm Credit. The survey showed:

1.) 3,456 clients in a healthy position 30.4%

2.) 3,909 some problems 34.3%

3.) 1,707 greater problems; showing stress 15.0%

4.) 1,220 greater problems than Category 3-moderate stress 10.7%

5.) 1,097 sever problems; severe stress 9.6%

While production credits figures are alarming, they further report that if the price-cost squeeze does not improve then they expect a further increase of dairy farmers falling into the stressful categories.

At our Pro Ag rallies it has always appeared that nearly 75% of the dairy farmers were experiencing some form of problems.

Farm Credit figures support our findings.

The main opposition to increasing prices to dairy farmers came from 3 consumer groups or watchdog groups. While these groups appeared not to be against the family farm, however, they did call such programs as the Northeast Dairy Compact a milk tax and the Compact should not be implemented. When Clyde Rutherford, a member of the Task Force asked the groups what alternatives they would suggest, they basically were mute.

My observation is that these groups are on a self-styled mission to promote their organizations and they don't represent the average consumer. I asked the spokesperson for Public Voice to stay and listen to my testimony. During the last 15 months, Pro Ag has interviewed 30,000 consumers (several from New York City) and only three have not agreed with our efforts.

In addition, we have spent 20,000 petitions signed by consumers to Washington, D.C. supportint our efforts.

It is now up to all of us to accomplish what must be done for our agriculture producers.

Adams Holstein Board Meets

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — With January 7, 1998, the deadline for membership renewal in the Pennsylvania Holstein Association's incentive program, the board of directors of the Adams County Club learned that they have some work to do to meet their goal. The board met on Monday, December 29, 1997, at the Adams County Extension Office in a membership wrapup meeting and agreed to make some additional personal contacts. Unpaid members will lose benefits after January 7 and the local club will be disqualified for the goal attained bonus.

Kevin Holtzinger thanked Marvin Brown and Rose Wenger for their special effort on behalf of the successful cheese sale. A total of 64 cases were sold, the profits going to support the club's scholarship and programs for youth and product promotion.

Club secretary Phil Van Lieu reported on his findings of programs conducted for junior members in neighboring Cumberland and Franklin counties. He agreed to call a meeting of the local junior members for the purpose of establilshing an agenda for the new year. He will alert these members of the September 15 deadline for applications for the club-sponsored college scholarship.

Marvin Brown, state director, reminded the directors that the deadlines are approaching for preregistration for both the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention and the 1998 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention. The latter will be held February 6-8 at the Holiday Inn, Uniontown.

President John Clowney appointed a committee to explore interest in the Dairy Princess program. Club support is available provided interested qualified candidates can be identified. Potential contestants should call him at 334-7011.

Committees are at work on plans for a late winter tour and a summer barn meeting. Plans will be announced at the next meeting of the board which was set for Saturday, February 8, 1998, at the Cross Keys Inn near New Oxford.

Grange Responds To Global Climate Treaty Proposal

HARRISBURG (Centre Co.) – The Pennsylvania State Grange recently sent a letter to President Bill Clinton and Pennsylvania'a congressional leaders voicing the organization's opposition to the Global Climate Treaty proposal.

"The Grange believes that the treaty, if ratified, will have severe consequences for United States citizens," Brenda Shambaugh, Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director, said. "The United States and a few other countries would be required to shoulder the burden of reducing greenhouse gas emissions while other developing nations would not have to meet those requirements. While we are not opposed to reducing emissions, we believe all nations should be equally responsible for there to be any substantial worldwide reductions."

Shambaugh said President Clinton is scheduled to travel to Japan next month for a summit on the Global Climate Treaty. Under the proposal, Shambaugh said the U.S. would be required to lower energy use by more than 20 percent, but that 132 out of 166 countries could be exempt from the treaty.

"About half of the current emissions come from developing countries that are now exempt from the proposed treaty," Shambaugh said. "As these countries continue to grow, their emissions will be proportionally higher and will offset reductions being made by other nations like the United States."

Shambaugh said the proposal also bodes badly for America's economic development. Shambaugh said it is estimated that electricity costs would rise more than 20 percent, natural gas prices would increase more than 45 percent, and gasoline would jump by 50 cents a gallon.

"A loss of hundreds of billions of dollars in economic development will mean the loss of hundreds of thousands of jobs," Shambaugh said. "Additionally, economists are stating American homes and businesses should expect a sharp increase in fuel, energy and transportation costs."

The Pennsylvania State, as well as the National Grange based in Washington, D.C., is calling for the development and immediate implementation of highly energy efficient technologies, a moratorium on a treaty decision until the global climate issue and its implications have been thoroughly researched, and assistance to developing nations to become more energy efficient without harming the economy in the United States.

"The plan is ineffective for the global environment and would negatively affect out nation," Shambaugh said. "With so much at stake, a headlong rush into this treaty could slam the brakes on our economy. Any fair and effective climate treaty must be truly global and balanced."

Delegates at the Pennsylvania State Grange Convention passed a resolution last month opposing the climate treaty. Because the issue has national implications, the resolution, which had become official Pennsylvania State Grange policy, was forwarded for debate at the National Grange Convention.

The resolution was also adopted by the delegates at that session and is official policy of the National Grange, which consists of more than 300,000 members in 37 states.

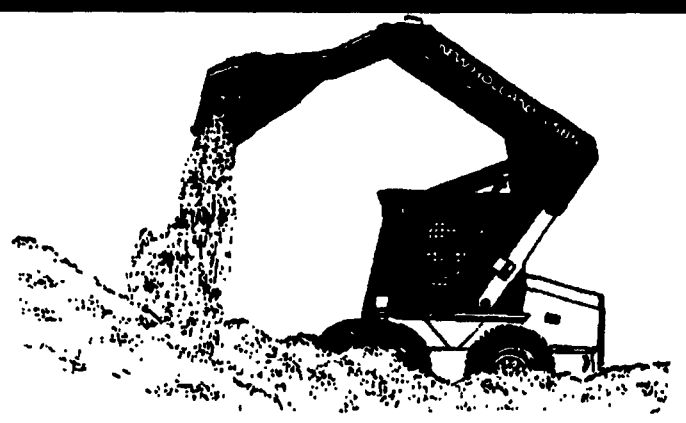
THE RELIABLE ONE



TOUGHER THAN THE REST

The New Holland Model Lx565 Super Boom™ skid-steer loader is tougher, more durable and more reliable than ever.

The "Lx565" offers a 40 horsepower diesel engine with an SAE load rating of a powerful 1,500 pounds.

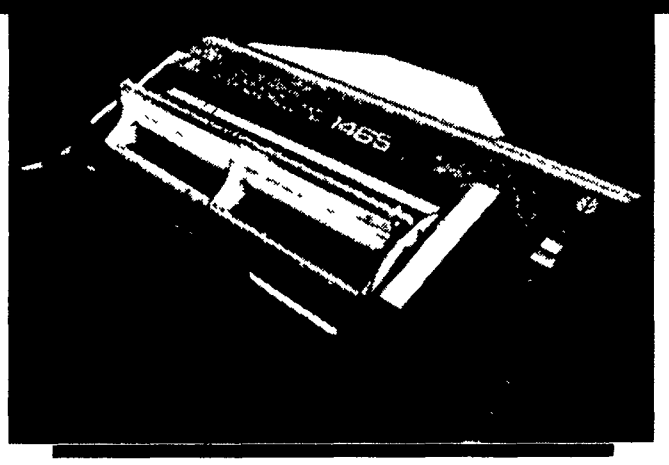
The Pick Up 'n Go™ universal attachment system makes it compatible with New Holland and competitive attachments. The strong boom design and massive loader pins make it more reliable.

And the quick engine access makes it easier to service.

See what makes the Super Boom so tough.

NEW HOLLAND

HAYBINE MOWER-CONDITIONERS



A BETTER WAY TO MOW

The New Holland Model 1465 Haybine® mower-conditioner features a new header with a five-bat reel for more uniform crop flow. You get a cleaner cut and less scalping in a proven design. And the "1465" can be ordered with a mechanical tongue shift or hydraulic tongue shift. Other great features include:

- A torsion-bar roll-pressure system
- Chevron-design rolls for thorough, gentle conditioning and fast drydown
- 100% bolted knife assemblies

When performance, reliability and durability count, you can count on the "1465".

Herbert Hoover Farney says, "I didn't think they could mix it."

Steve Dale, and Herbert Hoover Farney
Silvery Falls Farms - Lowville NY

Mr Farney is talking about mixing 11 5% long stem dry hay by ration weight in the Knight Reel Auggie 3450, which he and his sons decided to purchase in September of 1994

Herbert was born the day Herbert Hoover was elected president

The Farneys previously owned a three-auger Oswalt stationary unit They state that the "old mixer tended to ball material up, especially in wetter forages, while the Reel Auggie 3450 'fluffs' the ration "

The Farney's herd average is up about 1,000 lbs , and they have a higher protein test as well They milk 160 Holsteins, and feed a total of 260 head They like the low power requirement — the 390 cubic foot machine is powered by a John Deere 2030 tractor

3000 Reel Auggie TMR Mixers
Now available in seven sizes

Bt Corn Delivers Economic Benefits

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Studies at nearly 200 locations across the Corn Belt demonstrate that Bt insect-protected corn provides significant economic benefit. Hybrids with season-long protection against European corn borers outperform Bt brands that target primarily first-generation corn borers.

Comparisons conducted by several leading seed companies showed that Bt corn produced higher yields than non-Bt corn, and that YieldGard™ Insect-Protected Corn provided significantly higher yields than other Bt brands. YieldGard is the only product on the market that expresses the Baccillus thuringiensis (Bt) gene throughout the plant with season-long protection against multiple generations of corn borers.

Other Bt products lose effectiveness as the season progresses and do not effectively control second-generation corn borers that infest fields. In some regions, up to three generations of corn borers may attack fields in a season.

The research data show that YieldGard hybrids outperformed other Bt brands by an average of 15.7 bushels per acre. YieldGard ourperformed other Bt brands by an average 9.8 bushels per acre. In Iowa, where second-generation infestation was high, YieldGard hybrids outperformed the same non-Bt hybrids by an average of 21.6 bushels per acre. Across the Corn Belt, the overall average YieldGard advantage was 14.9 bushels per acre over the non-Bt isoline, returning growers $27.25 per acre after they paid for the technology.

Even in areas with light infestations of European corn borer, Bt protection resulted in improved yields of six or more bushels per acre.

"The data clearly show that the yield loss from even a mild outbreak of corn borers more than justifies the cost of protection that comes from planting Bt-protected corn," said Monsanto entomologist Dr. Paula Davis. She points to data from Ohio, where corn borer infestation was light in 1997, but where YieldGard hybrids outperformed the identical hybrid without the Bt gene by an average of 6.3 bushels per acre.

"These results indicate that growers can expect similar yield protection and economic benefits from YieldGard hybrids offered by various seed companies," said Eric Sachs, YieldGard corn business director. Sachs adds that the grower's choice of YieldGard hybrid should be based on the hybrid best suited to the grower's operation.

Davis said the trials offers strong evidence that second generation infestations may be more significant than previously thought. Harvested corn plants were checked for stalk tunneling, an indication of second-generation infestation. In non-Bt fields, state averages ranged from 40 to 95 percent of the plants with corn borer tunnels at harvest.

In the Year 2047, this Morton Building will still be Warranted Against Snow-Load Damage!

Todd & Cecil Irvin
Cecil J. Irvin and Son
State College, Pennsylvania

"This past winter we had at least 2 1/2 feet of wet snow on our Morton Building with no damage. In our area numerous farm buildings collapsed under the load. It's very reassuring to know that Morton's 50 year snow load warranty will be here for my son's future investment."

Todd & Cecil Irvin, State College, Pennsylvania

We at Susquehanna Valley Dairy wish you a joyous Christmas and a very prosperous 1998. We also want to thank all of our customers for making 1997 another good year. Listed below are some of the dairymen we've been privileged to work with in the past year.

1. Lamar Burkholder, Reamstown - bought a well bred herd, not pushed, the herd was averaging 55 lb. when he bought them, 2 months later, Lamar had them at 73 lb.
2. Steven Weaver, Stevens - bought a top herd in Vermont. Steven and his family had a celebration in the milk house one evening when they weren't even finished milking yet, and the tank started overflowing. 3 months after moving date, the milk man had to start coming every day, the herd was averaging 88 lb.
3. Matt Stoltzfus, Gap - bought a top herd in Vermont. Imagine how thrilled Matt was when 2 months after moving date, he had a cow at 135 lb. per day. His milkman also had to start coming everyday.
4. Dairyman in Little Britain - bought a top herd in Massachusetts. 6 days after moving date, the herd was averaging 65 lbs.
5. Harlan Zimmerman, Mifflinburg - bought a well bred, not pushed, herd in New York. The herd was averaging 55 lbs in New York - 4 months after moving, they were averaging 70 lbs.
6. Eli Nolt, Annville - bought a top herd in Massachusetts. At 3x a day milking, Eli had them right at 100 lb. daily average
7. Lamar Zimmerman, Loysville - In 1996, bought a reg. 18,000 lb. herd in New Jersey. 18 months later, Lamar had the herd over 24,000 D H.I A He also classified them with 1 Ex cow and several high V.G
8. A. Stoltzfus, Leola - bought a herd in New York in 1995. He bought 47 cows for his 42 cow barn. 2 years later when his own heifers started calving, he still wasn't able to tie in all his cows He only culled 4 cows in the first 2 years He was also the first dairyman on those facilities that had to have the milkman come every day

Plus many more, 24 herds sold in 1997
Also groups of Heifers for expansion projects sold to:
Raymond Good, Lititz
Melvin & Tim Kreider, Mount Joy
Rodney & Gretchen Metzler, Martinsburg
Fred & Cindy England, Williamsburg
Art & Diane Zug, Millerstown
Luzerne Farm - Ed Quigley, Spruce Creek

*We are well aware that 1997 was a very difficult year for dairy farmers. As you've done so many times in the past, I guess you need to look ahead and hope you have a better year next year. Seems like the dairyman needs to find ways to produce milk for less money, when all expenses increase. *Glenn Shirk said, "Looks like the dairyman needs to learn to work smarter, not harder". *Phil Zimmerman said "When the going gets tough, that's when the tough get going". My dad said "A smooth sea never made a good sailor". So let's learn from this difficult year. Grab the helm of the ship with both hands - and do as Christopher Columbus did. Sail On! and believe. Deut. 28:1-8

MURPHY'S ELK VIEW FARM

Located on a hilltop at the western end of what is called George's Valley, Ron & Cathy Murphy operate Elk View Farm A part of what we call "alternative farming" the Murphys raise between 70 to 100 elk each year Both animals and antlers are marketed The original intention almost ten years ago was to raise bull elk for the antlers that could be harvested and sold Elk antlers are used as ingredient in many medicines and potions particularly in the Orient Elk antlers sold by the pound can bring significant return on the open market Raised much the same way as we raise cattle, the Murphys have built their facilities to be as efficient and cost effective as possible A modern barn and enclosures, containing scales, holding and squeeze chutes, dividing pens and veterinary stations enable them to raise the elk with minimal labor

The elk business is really blossoming The sale of antlers is now and is expected to continue to be a productive cash crop Their goal is to raise bulls which consistently produce 40 pounds of antler Also, with the increased interest in elk within the area, has come the added value of breeding stock Today, Ron & Cathy are gearing more for the production of quality breeding stock than for straight antler production On the market today, a bred elk heifer may bring anywhere from $7,000 to $10,000, that is, if you can find someone to sell you one The Murphys are proud of their accomplishments At a recent show they had one of their bull elk rated as best in the show for the Eastern United States Maybe this could be an alternative for your operation

PLEASANT GAP FISH CULTURE STATION

The Pleasant Gap Fish Culture Station, owned and operated by The Pennsylvania Fish Commission, is used primarily for the rearing of trout to be stocked in Commonwealth waters open to public fishing Approximately 600,000 trout weighing some 340,000 pounds are raised annually at this station Although essentially a brown trout hatching and rearing facility, brook and rainbow trout are raised as well

Depending on the time of year, it is possible during your visit to observe eggs being incubated and the rearing of varying sizes and species of fish The tour takes you through the visitor's center where you learn of fish culture and history, habitat improvement, types of habitat, a living stream which is an indoor example of a trout stream, and display fish You will see the "hatch house" where incubation and hatching of fertilized eggs and the rearing of young trout "fry" takes place Outside are the raceways or rectangular ponds that are the home for the fish for most of the 15 months it takes for them to be ready to be placed in our streams and rivers for our fishing enjoyment

PLEASE SELECT ONE OF THE FOLLOWING TOURS FOR THURSDAY MORNING FEBRUARY 5, 1997

Tour A

PENNSYLVANIA MILITARY MUSEUM
THE 28th INFANTRY DIVISION SHRINE

The Pennsylvania Military Museum and the 28'h Infantry Division Shrine are both located on the grounds of The Pennsylvania Military Museum in historic Boalsburg The Museum examines Pennsylvania's military heritage, from Benjamin Franklin's first military unit, "The Associators", through Operation Desert Storm The tour is highlighted by a walk through a World War I battlefield trench, complete with light and sound effects Other major exhibits include a look at the development of modern arms, and a World War II retrospective There is a $3.00 admittance fee to tour the museum.

The 28th Infantry Division Shrine is located on the original training grounds of Col Theodore Boal's mounted machine gun troop Following the return of the officers and soldiers from Europe after World War I, they began holding reunions and dedicating shrines on these grounds In the 1950s, Pennsylvania's Historical and Museum Commission began operating the site Now, generations after its incarnation as a humble World War I memorial, the 28'h Infantry Division Shrine has blossomed as thousands more Division veterans have joined the ranks of their forebears The Great War memorials are still there, and are still laid out as their respective units were during the infamous battle of the Vesle River The most recent addition just completed and dedicated in September 1997 is the World War II Memory Wall The Wall commemorates all of the soldiers of the 28'h Division who died during World War II The 65 acre park also feature heavy equipment such as tanks and artillery that were a part of the 28th Division wartime inventory

COLUMBUS CHAPEL

Since 1789 Boal Mansion has been home to nine generations of the Boal family who were among the founders of nearby Boalsburg, Penn State University and the 28'h Division Shrine The grounds hold the original buildings, furnishings, and family archives It is also the site of the Columbus Chapel, the country's strongest link to Christopher Columbus

The chapel was part of the Columbus family castle in Spain It contains heirlooms that date back to the 1400s, including an admiral's desk, and explorer's cross of the kind planted on the shores of newly discovered territories, and masterpieces of European art Inherited by descendants of Columbus in the Boal family, the chapel was brought to Boalsburg in 1909 The chapel serves as an educational center, a shrine to the famous explorer, and a focus for Columbus' 500'h anniversary activities There is a $5.00 admittance fee to tour the Boal Mansion and Columbus Chapel.

Tour B

BRYCE JORDAN CENTER

Named after Penn State President Emeritus Dr Bryce Jordan who was instrumental in the creation of this building, the Bryce Jordan Center is the largest facility of its kind between Pittsburgh and Philadelphia The center, when set up for concerts, will seat in excess of 16,000 people With over 360,000 square feet it contains the largest portable basketball floor in the world and it weights over 40 tons In keeping with large numbers, the center's roof is 94 feet above the floor and weighs more than 4,400,000 pounds That's more than 2,000 circus elephants

The center is host to all types of shows and events including Penn State Nittany and Lady Lion Basketball in Big Ten action, concerts for all ages and tastes, family shows, circuses, trade shows and conventions Some of the entertainers who have performed there include Alabama, Kenny Rogers, The Eagles, Garth Brooks, Reba, Carmen, and George Strait to name a few

Located just across the street from Beaver Stadium, the Bryce Jordan Center is something you don't want to miss when you are in town

DAIRY CATTLE RESEARCH & EDUCATION CENTER

The state-of-the-art Dairy Cattle Research & Education Center positions Penn State to be a leader in dairy cattle research and education The future competitiveness of the dairy industry will depend on new scientific information from modern facilities The dairy center can house up to 180 head of milking cows and about the same number of replacements

Because the primary functions of this facility are research and education, you may notice some features here that you will not see on a typical production farm Due to their size and public use, the buildings were constructed without the use of wood Strict building codes required a sizable sprinkler system for fire control Explosion-type construction in the feed center Twelve-foot-wide travel lanes permit movement of 20-cow groups for research purposes Narrow holding lanes in the milking center allow moving groups of 60 cows at a time Section dividers in the free-stall barns accommodate feeders for individual feeding research trials Wide alleys in the tie-stall barn allow movement of mechanized feeding equipment for research

Facilities at the center include a feed center, tie stall barn, heifer barn, milking parlor and milk room, free stall barn, dry cow barn, intensive research unit and a calf barn

PENN STATE UNIVERSITY CREAMERY

Ice cream at the Creamery has been a Penn State tradition since 1896 While most people think of the creamery as only a retail store, it actually occupies a three-story wing of Borland Laboratory with individual areas for the processing of fluid milk and the manufacture of sour cream, various cheeses, and the famous ice cream, frozen yogurt, and sherbet

Penn State's creamery is the largest university creamery in the nation Each year approximately 3 5 million pounds of milk pass through the Creamery's stainless steel holding tanks About half of the milk comes from the University's Dairy Production Research Center and the balance from independent milk producers All this is used as a working laboratory for food science students in the College of Agricultural Sciences where they learn about milk processing, product manufacturing and marketing The Creamery also supports Pennsylvania's dairy industry by holding workshops and short courses and by working with industry to solve problems that effect the manufacturing and processing of dairy products

Tours of the Creamery take you through the various manufacturing facilities and demonstrate the various ways milk is transformed into the products we love, like Peachy Paterno ice cream Don't forget, the tour ends with a stop at the Creamery Store for samples

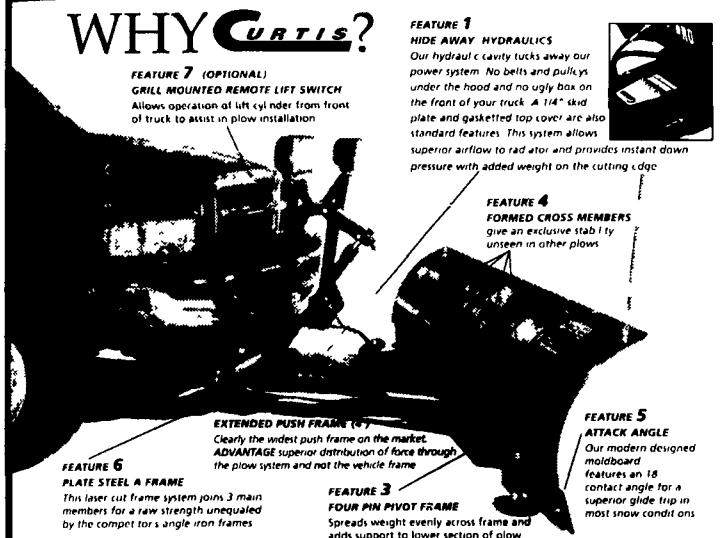
WHY CURTIS?



FEATURE 7 (OPTIONAL)
GRILL MOUNTED REMOTE LIFT SWITCH
Allows operation of lift cylinder from front of truck to assist in plow installation
FEATURE 1
HIDE AWAY HYDRAULICS
Our hydraulic cavity tucks away our power system. No belts and pulleys under the hood and no ugly box on the front of your truck. A 1/4" skid plate and gasketted top cover are also standard features. This system allows superior airflow to radiator and provides instant down pressure with added weight on the cutting edge
FEATURE 4
FORMED CROSS MEMBERS
give an exclusive stability unseen in other plows
EXTENDED PUSH FRAME (4")
Clearly the widest push frame on the market.
ADVANTAGE superior distribution of force through the plow system and not the vehicle frame
FEATURE 5
ATTACK ANGLE
Our modern designed moldboard features an 18 contact angle for a superior glide trip in most snow conditions
FEATURE 6
PLATE STEEL A FRAME
This laser cut frame system joins 3 main members for a raw strength unequaled by the competitors angle iron frames
FEATURE 3
FOUR PIN PIVOT FRAME
Spreads weight evenly across frame and adds support to lower section of plow

TWENTY YEARS IN FARM REAL ESTATE BROKERAGE

Mahlon & Ellie Oberholtzer

"Behind every successful man, there's a good woman – thanks Ellie"

We have just completed 20 years of service to the farming public in central Penna. in putting together buyers' needs with sellers' needs. I would dare to say this has been a very rewarding experience to me especially after my reluctance to even attempt this kind of activity. But, my banker friend persuaded me that I was the kind of guy who could succeed in this business

Success is not measured only in terms of dollars but even better in the amount of good friends developed over the years. Incidently, as I look at the map I can recall doing business in as many as 25 counties in central Penna.

So, I just want to say Thank You to all my past customers and say welcome to the new year and all the new friends and customers. May God bless you with prosperity and friends beyond your wildest imagination. Keep those calls coming and we will do our best to fill your needs (and wants), THANK YOU!!

Mahlon Oberholtzer

210 FFA Keystone Recipients Help Build The Future

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — When the ceremonies begin, 210 FFA members from across the state will step up to the platform to receive their Keystone Degrees on Monday, Jan. 12, in the large arena of the Farm Show Complex.

The annual ceremonies during state Farm Show bestow the Keystone Degree, the highest degree awarded by the state, to eligible FFA members.

Members and their chapters contribute in many ways to the "I Believe in the Future" capital campaign to relocate the National FFA Center to Indianapolis, Ind. in May 1998. At the 70th National FFA Foundation Convention in Kansas City, Mo. in mid-November 1997, $2.97 million had been pledged to the campaign, it was announced.

FFA members across the state have dedicated their year this year to the theme, "Building The Future." Less than 10 percent of Pennsylvania's FFA members ever receive the Keystone Degree, according to the state FFA Foundation.

There are certain requirements an FFA member must meet in order to receive the degree. Only seniors and graduates are eligible. They must have demonstrated leadership ability, must have earned from their own efforts in farming or from the supervised agricultural experience (SAE) program, and deposited in a bank or otherwise productively invested at least $1,000 or worked at least 300 hours in excess of scheduled class time.

The Pennsylvania FFA Association commends all the Keystone Degree recipients for their hard work and dedication throughout their years in FFA.

Of the 210 Keystone Degree recipients, four will be named to the position of state star in their respective area. Selection of state stars is contingent on their SAE program. Their programs must show comprehensive planning, continuation, growth, and increase in scope with records to substantiate such accomplishments.

Four area stars include production agriculture; ag sales, service, and mechanics; horticulture; and specialized agriculture, including forestry, natural resources, and nontraditional agriculture.

All FFA family members and friends are invited to witness the talents and celebrate the accomplishments of FFA members throughout the state.

While FFA members work to build their own future, they are ensuring the success of the biggest ag youth organization in the world. That work is evident in what individual FFA members have accomplished in their tenure with their own chapters.

Lancaster Farming salutes those working to build the future in this special Farm Show issue, which features the following information about all the recipients. May they continue to reap success while building a sound organization for those to follow.

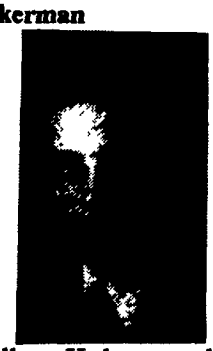
Jessica S. Abel

Jessica S. Abel understands the 1998 theme well. With a focus on building for the future, she noted that "FFA gives me the opportunity to practice leadership and other skills that will benefit me in the future."

Jessica, 17, daughter of Joyce Abel, Creekside, is a four-year member of Marion Center FFA at Marion Center High School. She served as chapter secretary, vice president, and is president. She has served on various committees, including banquet, Building Our American Communities (BOAC), Food For America, and FFA Week. Projects have included diversified livestock production.

Jessica, who plans to attend college and major in agricultural education, has won third place in the state extemporaneous public speaking contest. She received her Star Greenhand and Star Chapter Farmer degrees.

Dan Ackerman



Dan Ackerman noted that he enjoys "meeting new people and the fun times" as a three-year Somerset County AVTS member.

Dan, 18, son of Mark and Diane Ackerman, Somerset, plans to attend college. He has served as chapter chaplain and sentinel and is president. Dan has been involved in the BOAC, banquet, and demonstration committeees and has directed laboratory experience in and out of school. He has won a gold medal at the national forestry contest and received his Greenhand and Chapter degrees.

Amanda Amoros

Four-year Twin Valley FFA member Amanda Amoros enjoys the opportunities that FFA provides. If you take advantage of these opportunities, you will benefit greatly throughout life, she noted.

Amanda, 17, daughter of Libby and Tony Amoros, Mohnton, has served as chapter historian and is secretary. While serving her FFA, she has been a member of a wide variety of committees, including Food for America, Ag Day breakfast, citrus sale, and attended a variety of conferences, including the Western Pennsylvania Leadership Conference, Penn State Collegiate FFA Officers Conference, and others. She has participated in various projects and exhibits with local fairs. Amanda plans to attend college.

Jaime L. Anderson

Daughter of Myron and Polly Anderson, Danville, Jaime Anderson noted that the "most I enjoy about FFA is going on different trips, seeing new things, meeting new people, and working on projects."

Jaime, 17, four-year Danville FFA member, has served as vice president and is president. She has served on the banquet and citrus committees. Jaime has worked at the Montour Delong Fair. She has earned her Greenhand and Chapter degrees. She plans to attend college to study agribusiness.

Jason Anthony

Jason Anthony, son of Edward and Karen Anthony, Rochester Mills, and a Marion Center FFA member, noted that he enjoys "all the activities that we do."

Jason, who plans a future in ag business, has served as chapter sentinel, treasurer, and is vice president. The FFA member has served on the Foods for America Committee and has been involved in various projects, including ag sales and swine and beef production. He has received awards in swine and beef production, small gas engine, and livestock judging. Jason has received the Greenhand and Chapter Farmer degrees.

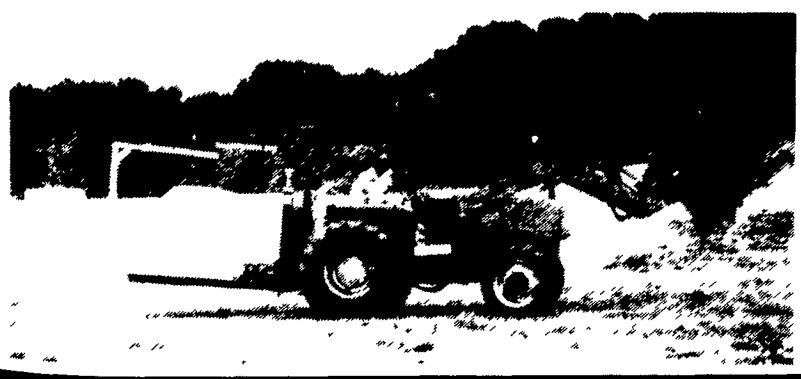
TUBE-LINE BALEWRAPPER

For optimum speed and efficiency patented Tube-Line Wrappers are the answer! Tube-Line Wrappers wrap a continuous row of bales. The airtight application of stretch wrap film retains moisture balance as haylage matures and prevents air infiltration. The shrink wrap also prevents wind damage and accommodates variation in bale size and shape without air gaps.

Long stem silage is better used in the animals digestive system. Feeding high quality haylage from wrapped bales can reduce or eliminate feeding grain while retaining or increasing weight gains or milk production.

Tube-Line wrappers for all round bales or large square bales are available in either manual or fully automatic models.

AG WRAP BALE WRAPPER



Wraps Bales up to 5 ft. x 5 1/2 ft.

- 3-Point Hitch
- Hydraulic requirement 4 GPM – 2 remotes
- Pre-stretcher for plastic

STOP RAINING ON THE ANIMALS

It has been raining on animals since a horse plowed the first furrow. Condensation forming under the roofs of farm buildings is the reason. And that's because there's never been a perfect insulation product for farm buildings.

Until now. Introducing Thermax® AG Therm™ Insulation/Finish Board from Celotex.

AG Therm stops the rain and stops the elements. AG for agriculture. Therm for thermal.

It works for all kinds of buildings. No matter who's in it or what's in it. Install it in new buildings or improve old ones. Celotex made it for you. The animals will thank you. For information where to purchase AG Therm, call Celotex at 1-800-556-4215.

Are You Getting Your Money's Worth?

If You're Not Liming Properly, You're Throwing Away Part Of Every Fertilizer Dollar.

By correcting soil acidity, limestone frees-up desirable nutrients that feed your crop. Plus, limestone ties up toxic elements that reduce crop production.

High nitrogen use in modern farming practices acidifies the soil quickly. This limits your crop vigor and yields. Therefore, today it's more important than ever to lime according to soil test results. Proper liming gives you the most from your fertilizer dollar.

Hilton Honored For Advising Excellence

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – James Hilton, associate professor of agricultural engineering at Penn State, has received the 1997 College of Agricultural Sciences Alumni Society Excellence in Academic Advising Award.

Hilton coordinates the Agricultural Systems Management (ASM) program and advises between 40 and 50 undergraduate students each year. He also advises the ASM Club and is serving a second term as adviser to the Agricultural Student Council.

Hilton was nominated for advising award by students in the ASM Club, with supporting letters from faculty, administrators, students, and graduates.

Throughout my undergraduate career, his door has always been open whenever I had a question, whether about schedules or something else pertaining to college life," wrote one student. "He makes a large university seem a lot smaller by adding his personal touch."

I honestly believe that I would not have completed my college education without his guidance," wrote a former advisee. "His knowledge, wisdom, and belief in us served as an example to me and many others not only to finish college, but to excel at all we attempted."

Hilton, who earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural education from Penn State, joined the college faculty in 1978. He earned a doctorate in agricultural education from Iowa State University in 1979. In 1992, Hilton was among 12 college faculty members to receive the Provost's Award for Collaborative Instruction and Curricular Innovation for outstanding collaborative teaching in AG 150, Be a Master Student! In 1993, students in the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering recognized his contributions with the Alpa Epsilon Outstanding Faculty Award.

New PMCGA President Wants Vote On Corn Checkoff

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHELOCTA (Indiana Co.) — Chris Kimmel is steadfast about his plans

The new president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) intends, within the next two years, to put a referendum before the state corn growers

That referendum will address the question will Pennsylvania have a corn checkoff?

Already, the PMCGA knows the direction it must take At the Crops Conference in Grantville early this year, corn growers [illegible] ballo[illegible]ly in crops, including about 800 in corn. The passing of a checkoff, calculated at point of sale and based on a similar program in Maryland, would mean a lot to the commercial growers who want to see better promotion of the product, in addition to money for research at land grant universities (Those same universities are already experiencing the withdrawal of government money — those dollars have to come from somewhere)

This is the first time Kimmel has served as president of PMCGA, although he has served as vice president for a few years He serves on the corn check-off committee in the

"We also have learned to subsoil the ground to 18 inches deep and keep the soil real loose to benefit the root system," said Beck Even in a dry year, he said, subsoiling is "very beneficial" for a healthier, more productive crop

The wet weather this year was a real challenge It "held us back in terms of subsoiling and tillage," Beck said

What farmers are discovering, he indicated, was that the use of a starter fertilizer in the row with a lot of urea can have detrimental effects on a crop The fertilizer can burn the root system

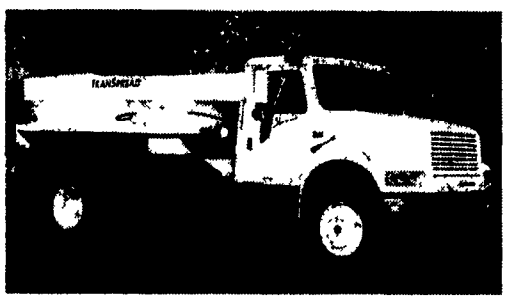
Meeting All Your APPLICATION EQUIPMENT NEEDS

TRANSPREAD CHASSIS MOUNT

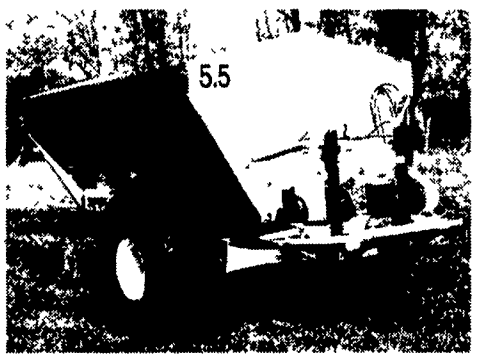


The widest spread pattern in the industry allows the Transpread to cover 50 to 100% more acres per day than conventional spreaders, adding significantly to the applicator's bottom line. Transpread is capable of spreading lime, gypsum, fowl manure, and most types of fertilizers.

The Transpread body is constructed out of Mild or 304 stainless steel and is available in 8-ton 12' body. The Transpread features a 30" wide heavy duty bare chain that runs over UHMW trough. This allows the Transpread to spread rates as low as 150 abs. to the acre with fertilizer and up to 4 tons of lime to the acre and almost eliminates bridging with lime.

The Raven Computer Spread with radar gun is a state of the art control system that was designed exclusively for GVM. After you program your rate, it remains constant, regardless of the speed you travel.

TRANSPREAD PULL SPREADER



With a design and development history in spreading technology of over twenty years on three continents, GVM now offers the new generation of spreaders. Tested extensively throughout the world and offering unbeatable spreading precision, the simple to use controls and ultimate flexibility save the farmer both time and money.

The widest spread pattern in the industry allows the Transpread to cover 50 to 100% more acres per day than conventional spreader, adding significantly to the Farmer's bottom line. Transpread is capable of spreading lime, gypsum, fowl manure, and most types of fertilizers.

The 3.0 ton, 4.5 ton and 5.5 ton spreaders feature a 33" wide even flow belt with cleats that run over completely sealed rollers with stainless steel shafts. This allows the unit to operate at rates as low as 50 pounds of fertilizer per acre, and as high as 2 tons of lime per acre. The Transpread comes standard with split rear doors enabling the farmer to restrict spreading to one side only, ideal for spreading headlands or splitting your spread pattern.

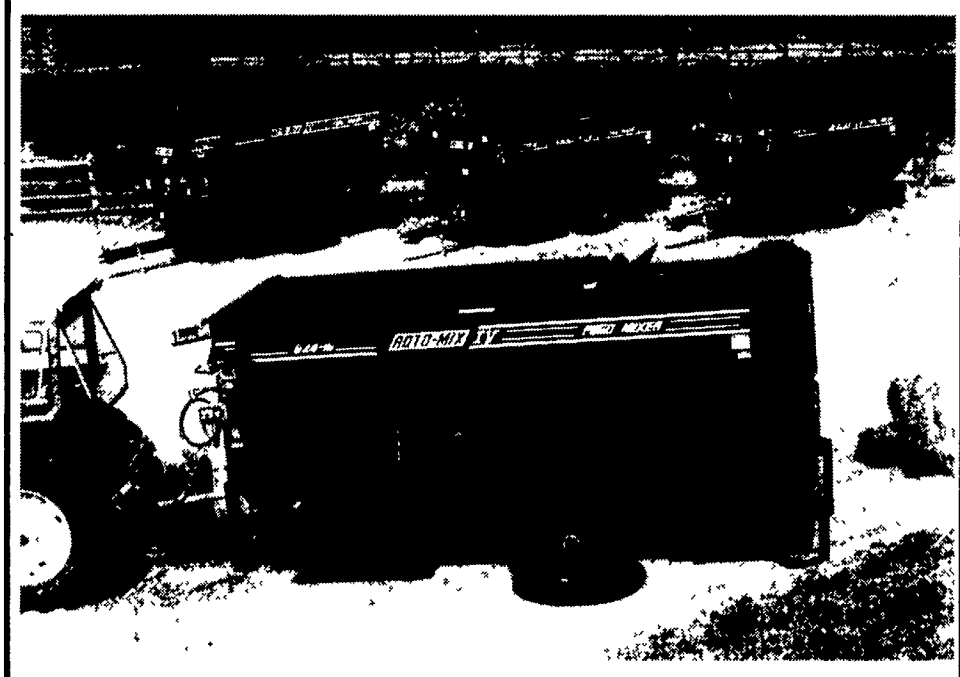
ROTO-MIX FEED MIXERS



The ROTO-MIX professionals know that quality feed means increased consumption, therefore, higher production levels With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling aciton mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

Nothing robs a ration of nutritional value more than fines. Conventional auger mixers use pressure to move the feed through the mixing chamber, thus crushing the feed and creating fines. But the ROTO-MIX patented mixing system uses a rotor to gently lift the feed past the wedging point of the lower side auger, keeping fines to a minimum and reducing nutritional loss.

Even the most nutritious ration is effective only if the cattle eat the complete ration. Improperly mixed feed allows the cattle to "nose out" what they don't want, disrupting the balance of nutrients. But the ROTO-MIX end-to-end...side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

Check all the ROTO-MIX advantages... the bottom line is what counts.

Indiana County To Make Big Showing

RANDY WELLS
Indiana Co. Correspondent

INDIANA (Indiana Co.) – Some of the largest living exhibits at January's 82nd Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg will come from Indiana County

The biggest animals at the annual exposition are the draft horses, and Jerry and Shirley Ray of Shelocta will continue their 25-year tradition of driving east with a trailer-load of their big Belgian horses

This year, Farm Show officials allocated space for 45 Belgian horses.

"We entered nine and got accepted with four," Jerry Ray said. But with those four animals the Rays expect to enter more than a dozen halter and cart classes competition

Mature Belgian draft horse typically weigh 1,800 to 2,200 pounds, according to Ray. He plans to compete at the Farm Show with a stallion that stands 18 hands tall and weights about 2,300 pounds

The Rays expect seven colts at their farm by spring, bringing their herd of Belgians back up to 25 animals.

Another of the most consistent Farm Show exhibitors from Indiana County - and perhaps the state - is Clyde McConaughey. For more than 50 years he has been trucking swine to the Farm Show from his Mahoning Creek Farms near Smicksburg.

This year he has eight Durocs and eight Hampshire bred gilts ready to make the trip. As in past years, he emphasized it's important for hog producers to take as many animals as possible to show

"You've got to have the numbers there to keep the buyers coming in," McConaughey said. "You can't have 25 head there and expect to have buyers."

Normally the show's swine competition and sale features 160 or more animals, he said

Hogs sold at last year's Farm Show went home with buyers from all around New England.

"We sent hogs ourselves into four state," he said.

Although Farm Show publicity lists Saturday, Jan. 10 as the opening day for the public McConaughey said savvy buyers attend the swine judging on Friday, Jan. 9. The Swine Show is open to the public.

Steve Kwisnek of Clarksburg has been entering sheep at the Farm Show competition for more than 20 years. In January he plans to compete with nine southdowns from his Scenic View Farms

Kwisnek's Southdowns have been consistent winners in the Farm Show. The annual competition in Harrisburg is just one stop on a circuit of annual shows and sales that keep Kwisnek's sheep before the eyes of potential buyers.

"If you don't show them and win, you don't sell them," he said.

Of course not all exhibitors ar the Farm Show will be transporting animals.

Leanne Griffith, organizational leader for the Handy Helpers 4-H Club at Marion Center, expects her 30 club members to take or deliver entries of baked goods, hand-embroidered and toll painted items and sewing projects ranging from gym bags to gowns.

"My group alone will send 40 or 50 items," she said. "Every year we've had winners."

To enter projects in 4-H competition at the Farm Show, club members first must have participated in the judging during a local 4-H roundup and must have won a ribbon for their entry at a local fair.

Assisting Griffith with the club are 15 other adults who teach other topics to sub-groups within the club.

"We also have have a strong rocketry program," Griffith said.

Indiana County may also send two Amandas to the Farm Show–Amanda Davis, a junior at Marion Center Area High, and Amanda Hutcheson, a senior at Blarisville High School. They are Indiana County's 4-H ambassadors.

"We represent the whole 4-H program," said Hutcheson, who is a member of several 4-H clubs, including the Lucky Kids Goat Club.

Hutcheson in the past has entered posters in Farm Show competition. This year she'll also be wearing the hat of a coach for two potato-judging teams.

In June, Davis took up knitting as a new 4-H hobby. In six weeks she finished her first project – a sweater that was a prize-winner at the Indiana County Fair and later was on display at the opening of the Country Spun Studio near Punxsutawney.

When she's not knitting, Davis is also active in 4-H sewing and cooking projects.

Landing support and encouragement to all the Indiana County exhibitors are the dozens of other county residents who make the trek to the Farm Show each year as spectators. Once again this year many of them will take advantage of an Indiana Kiwanis Club-sponsored bus trip, eliminating the hassles of January driving.

Dairy Salutes School Meals At Farm Show

PITTSBURGH – Dairy, Pennsylvania's leading agricultural industry, will pay tribute to the school breakfast and lunch programs as part of the 1998 Pennsylvania Farm Show activities held from Jan. 10-15.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion (PDPP) and the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) will unveil the eight annual butter sculpture at this year's Farm Show. The sculpture will feature milk and other commodities produced in Pennsylvania that play an integral role in the school meal program.

More than one million school breakfast and lunch meals are served everyday in Pennsylvania. That means that 62,500 gallon of milk are served as part of qualified school meals each day.

The school meal program ensures that every child regardless of family income can purchase a safe and nutritious meal at school.

Children and parents who visit the butter sculpture will receive a button featuring the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's school food safety theme, "Good learners need good food." Children also can receive a free stick-on "got milk" tattoo at the PDPP booth located on the main exhibit floor.

Ed Shank, Middletown, will craft the butter sculpture from 800 pounds of butter donated by Land O'Lakes, Inc.

In addition to the butter sculpture, PDPP will host the fifth annual Scooper Bowl Sunday ice cream fundraiser Sunday, Jan. 11 from 11 a.m until 3 p.m.

Patrons can sample all the ice cream they can eat for a $3 donation to the Four Diamonds Fund.

News From New Bolton Center...

School of Veterinary Medicine
UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

The primary responsibility of the swine initiative is to graduate veterinarians that are trained to provide service to the Pennsylvania swine industry. At right is Sally Anne Aschenbrand with, from left, Dr. Paul Pitcher and Dr. Tom Parsons.

SWINE INITIATIVE AT THE SCHOOL OF VETERINARY MEDICINE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA
T.D. Parsons, V.M.D., Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of Swine Production Medicine

Introduction

The Pennsylvania swine industry is in a period of growth and expansion. It is vying with poultry production to be the runner-up behind dairy as the State's second most important agricultural industry. The hog population in Lancaster County remains one of the nation's most dense. However, expansion beyond the traditional borders of swine production in Pennsylvania has been compelled by continued industry growth To help accommodate the burgeoning needs of this industry's expansion, the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine has established a program in swine production medicine.

The Penn swine initiative was launched at the university's large animal campus, New Bolton Center, to address the changing requirements for veterinary involvement in this dynamic food animal industry. In 1994, Paul Pitcher, D.V.M., M.S. joined the staff as clinical educator in swine production management, and a year and a half later, I came aboard as assistant professor in swine production medicine.

Drs. Pitcher and Parsons bring to New Bolton Center an extensive and diverse background in swine medicine. Pitcher has graduate training in epidemiology, has worked as a private practitioner in Iowa and as a federal veterinary medical officer on the nation-wide pseudorabies eradication project. I have a background in basic research, having trained at the Max Planck Institute in Several continuing education programs are available for both veterinarians and local swine producers. Producer education programs are recognized as the most effective approach to accomplish the service mission goal which is to complement and extend the existing expertise provided to the Pennsylvania swine industry via the local swine practitioners, cooperative extension agents, and allied industry consultants.

News from New Bolton Center...

Heidelberg, Germany, and have an extensive publishing record on swine reproductive diseases.

The clinical swine program at New Bolton Center is broadly divided into three components: teaching, service and research. Teaching is a top priority and Drs. Pitcher and Parsons are focusing on service and research commitments as issues that directly embellish their teaching efforts. The primary responsibility of the swine initiative is to graduate veterinarians that are trained to provide service to the Pennsylvania swine industry. However, the education mission does not stop with veterinary students. Several continuing education programs are now available for both veterinarians and local swine producers, and are described in detail below. Subsequent articles in this series will address the development of a swine curriculum at the veterinary school, and the research endeavors of the Penn swine group.

The goal of our swine service mission is to complement and extend the existing expertise provided to the Pennsylvania swine industry via the local swine practitioners, cooperative extension agents, and allied industry consultants. Producer education programs are recognized as the most effective approach to accomplish the service mission goal. In collaboration with the Pennsylvania State University Extension Service, two educational programs have been implemented. Both are sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) and target sustainable pork production.

Producer Education Programs

The first is Pork Quality Assurance (PQA) program designed to maintain consumer confidence in pork products. Swine producers are provided with a list of 10 critical control checkpoints that will help ensure that pork reaching the consumer's table is of the highest possible quality. A major emphasis of this program is reenforcing management practices that prevent antibiotic residue from entering the human food chain. Producers can progress through three levels of certification, and must be re-certified every two years.

Progressive meat processors such as Hatfield's Quality Meats strongly recommend their suppliers of market hogs be certified at the highest level (level III). Hat-field's continues to take an active role in the support of this important educational process Food safety concepts in this country are shifting more toward the "farm-to-fork approach", and the PQA program remains the livestock industry's gold standard. During the 10 year existence of the PQA program, incidence of antibiotic residues found in pork carcasses has been reduced from 10 to 1%. PQA certification was initiated by the NPPC more than 10 years ago and can now be obtained via the Penn swine group at producer meetings or in combination with Environmental Assurance program farm visits.

The second program is the Environmental Assurance (EA) program that emphasizes the need for hog producers to utilize environmentally friendly management practices. In addition to the best management practices for manure handling, suggestion are provided for odor management, dealing with complaints by neighbors, and developing contingency plans to deal with manure crisis situations. This program has recently been described in more detail in another series of Lancaster Farming articles. EA certification remains available through the University of Pennsylvania swine group and requires a farm visit.

In addition to these two programs, clinical services, provided in the context of the School's teaching mission, include: ventilation assessments, blood collection for regulatory issues, computerized record analysis consultation, in-depth investigation of herd health problems, and slaughter checks.

The swine initiative at the School of Veterinary Medicine University of Pennsylvania is committed to strong service, teaching, and research components in its effort to better serve the Pennsylvania swine industry. It looks to train the future Pennsylvania swine veterinarians, to complement existing local practitioner activities with extensive continuing education programs for the swine producers, and to generate new information via research to help the industry progress in to the 21st century. For questions or additional information call the Center for Animal Health and Productivity at 610-444-5800, ext. 2345.

Schinell, 'Sammy' Off To Farm Show

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

MCCLURE (Snyder Co.) – What does it take to show horses, steers, pigs and sheep through FFA and 4-H? To milk cows at 5 a.m. before going to school? Energy!

Seventeen-year-old Schinell Renninger from McClure, Mifflin County, loves animals and doesn't like being bored. As a senior at the Juniata/Mifflin Counties Vocational Technical School in Lewistown, she'll show her market sheep named Sammy for the first time at the Farm Show.

Schinell bought a Suffolk-Dorset cross from her FFA adviser Mark Laub. He and Schinell's parents, Steven and Rhonda, encouraged her to show at the Farm Show. FFA adviser Kim Steward helped band her sheep for show the show.

"Schinell is very enthusiastic. She's an active member of our FFA, has served as vice president, and now is a student advisor," said Mark.

"I've always wanted to show at the Farm Show," Schinell said. "I just want to see how good I can do against kids throughout the state. At our local fair, we can see what the competition is. I can't do that at the Farm Show. I'm only there during the day. I stay overnight only if I have to. I like to come to school."

Schinell will help the FFA landscaping club set up its farm Show Display and will join the beef club to watch judging.

"I just love animals. You can tell them anything and they won't tell anyone! They relieve a lot of stress. You don't have too many bad days with animals."

As a 4-H member for five years and an FFA member for four, Schinell's dedication has paid off. She's earned grand champion fitting for her beef projects and reserve showmanship for her beef and sheep projects She is also a member of the swine and horse clubs.

She wakes each morning at 5 a.m. to milk cows at her uncle Darvin Renninger's farm. She recently tore or stretched some ligaments in her ankle while playing volleyball. Her injury has slowed her movements but not her enthusiasm.

"I haven't been able to milk for two weeks. It's just killin' me! I have to be moving. I don't like to get bored."

When Schinell looses the crutches, she'll need to wear an air cast for three months but will be allowed to milk cows.

After graduation, Schinell would like to attend college to become a landscape designer or a veterinarian's assistant. She'd like to dairy farm, too.

Agrisurance Safety Group Pays $335,000 Dividend To Farmers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — If farmers needed another reason to farm safely, they've got one in the form of financial rewards. More than 600 farmers will receive dividend checks as rewards for farming safely. The dividends will come from Agrisurance, a workers' compensation safety group managed by Agri-Service Agencies, Inc., of Syracuse, N.Y.

Recently, Agri-Service Agencies presented Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr., with a symbolic check for $335,000, representing the total amount of the insurance company's dividend return to its farmer-members. The meeting will be held at the Pennsylvania State College Days Inn from 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. and will be attended by several of the group's farmer-members.

"Workers' compensation costs need to be reduced in order for Pennsylvania agriculture to be competitive with farm businesses in order states," said Craig Buckhout, president of Agri-Service Agencies. "Through Agrisurance, we are able to provide coverage at a rate that is up to 25 percent below the standard bureau rate and share the benefits of safe farming by paying a dividend."

The Agrisurance workers' compensation safety group began in 1994 as part of a program through the State Workmen's Insurance Fund (SWIF). In 1996, ASA put together an innovative program with USF&G, an "A"-rated national carrier. The program is now able to pay dividends based on the group's favorable claims experience. During the 1996-97 fiscal year, the group's 600 members experienced an excellent loss-ratio, made fewer claims and, as a result, earned a substantial dividend. Checks presented this month to members represent a total 20 percent group dividend plus an extra five percent for members boasting a low loss-ratio.

For more than 25 years, Agri-Service Agencies has proved health insurance and other employee benefit programs to farmers and agribusiness owners across the Northeast. Agri-Service Agencies is a subsidiary of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., a Syracuse-based agricultural service organization, cooperatively owned by more than 2,800 dairy farmers.

For more information about the State College check presentation, contact Paul Quinn at Agri-Service Agencies at (800) 654-8840.

COMMERCIAL EXHIBITOR KEY

The Pennsylvania State Farm Show exhibition area is a large complex comprised of 11 display areas, essentially inside seven adjoining buildings. Spaces for commercial exhibitors are designated in eight display areas. To locate specific Farm Show commercial exhibitors, find the name of the exhibitor, and then look for the building area code and the space number. For example: ABS Global Inc. is the commercial exhibitor; it is located in the Northeast Building on the lower level (NE-LL) in exhibit lots 15 and 16.

MAIN FLOOR: No building designation before the number.

NORTH BUILDING: Space numbers preceeded by "N."

NORTHEAST BUILDING: Either designated as NE-LL for the lower level, or NE-2nd for second floor spaces.

FOOD COURT: No other designation (used to be called the East Building).

NORTHWEST BUILDING: Space numbers preceeded by NW.

LARGE ARENA: Commercial exhibitors are generally confined to the lower level of the Large Arena and the symbol is LA-LL.

WEST LOBBY: The West Lobby has become synonymous with the Pennsylvania Marketplace — where food processors and retailers can set up stands to promote their products.

- Eliminates excessive pull and stress on hydraulic components associated with other guidance systems.
- Very few moving parts provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement.
- Works effectively on all conventional and ridge-till cultivators, planters and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.

NASA Space Station Team Makes The 'Trek' To Farm Show

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – If outer space holds a fascination for you, then the 1998 Pennsylvania State Farm Show will be the place to be, Jan. 10-15 in Harrisburg, Pa.

The NASA International Space Station Program (ISSP) Outreach Team will be on hand to give visitors a taste of life in orbit.

Under the sponsorship of the Pennsylvania Space Grant Consortium based at Penn State, the ISSP team will provide information on the new space station, which NASA is scheduled to begin assembling in space during 1998. The future orbiting laboratory will support investigations in human life sciences, plant and animal research, Earth sciences and space technology. Free of the influence of gravity, researchers will be able to study the basic properties of life and physical mechanisms of fluid, combustion and crystal growth.

At the ISSP exhibit, several hands-on interactive simulators that are used to train astronauts at the NASA Johnson Space Center will be available. Visitors will be able to climb into an engineering model of the Manned Maneuvering Unit and take a virtual ride around the Space Station assembly operations with the Space Shuttle robot arm, using flight-rated hand controllers. Younger astronaut "trainees" can climb into an extravehicular activity space suit on display. An electronic still camera will be available to record the experience.

A videoconference link between the Farm Show exhibit and the Johnson Space Center in Houston, TExas, will enable visitors to take an electronic field trip to the NASA Space Station training facility, where astronauts will prepare for upcoming Space Station missions. The live, one-hour interactive videoconference sessions will take place twice daily (except Sunday) at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Penn State faculty member and astronaut James Pawelczyk is scheduled to appear on a teleconference on Thursday, Jan.. 15 at 11 a.m. Visitors will have an opportunity to ask him questions about the space program and about his upcoming mission on the Space Shuttle slated for April 1998.

For more information on the International Space Station Program, visit the ISSP site on the World Wide Web at http://station.nasa.gov.

Also, on Tuesday, Jam. 13 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., Toby Carlson, Penn State Professor of meteorology, and Traci Arthur, Penn State graduate student, will present an exhibit at the SpaceGrant Consortium's booth focusing on "Satellite Monitoring of Urban Sprawl." Carlson's research uses satellite technology, image analysis and land surface models to help planners and developers assess the impact of urban development. The technology can predict encroachment by urbanization in protected and sensitive areas and illustrate urban pressures on the landscape for agencies dealing with agricultural, ecological or forest resources.

The Space Grant Consortium's exhibit will be located in the new Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center on the second floor of the Northeast Building of the Farm Show Complex on Cameron Street. Teacher materials will be available.

For more information about the Pennsylvania Space Grant Consortium of The Pennsylvania State University, visit the consortium's World Wide Web site at http://www.psu.edu/spacegrant, or contact Geraldine Russell by e-mail at paspace@psu.edu or by telephone at (814) 863-7688.

Penn State Features IPM At Farm Show

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre County) – Integrated pest management (IPM), a crop production system that combines a wide array of physical, biological and chemical approaches to manage pest insects, diseases, weeds and rodents, is growing in popularity.

Visitors to the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, Jan. 10-15 in Harrisburg, can find out exactly what IPM is and how it benefits agriculture, consumers and the environment.

The Pennsylvania IPM program, a collaboration between Penn State and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, will feature several IPM-related displays at the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences booth in the Main Exhibits Hall of the Farm Show complex.

"By using available information about what pests are present, their life cycles and behavior, and the range of control options, IPM often can help growers rely less on chemical pesticides.: says Edwin Rajotte, Penn State IPM coordinator and associate professor of entomology. "And that, in turn, reduces environmental impact, enhances agricultural worker and food safety, contributes to farm profitability and minimizes the chances that pests will develop resistance to pesticides."

The IPM displays will include several interactive exhibits:

—"IPM Tool Time" will feature a small garden of plants with a variety of traps and other IPM tools and technologies on display.

— "IMP and the Consumer" will center on a re-created Wegman's supermarket aisle containing various canned vegetable products. Wegman's, a regional grocery chain based in New York, has established an IPM labeling program to educate consumers about the benefits of buying products grown using certified IPM standards.

— A display focusing on IPM information sources will feature production guides and other printed materials, as well as a live toll-free telephone service that producers can call for updates on pest infestations or for scheduled pesticide education programs around the state.

In addition, visitors will learn about biological control by watching through a microscope as ladybugs devour pest aphids; view exotic insects, such as Australian walking sticks and giants cockroaches; and use a computer to identify insects.

"There are an estimated 7 million or more species of insects, but only about 350 species are considered pests," says Rajotte. "Because you need to know you have a pest problem before you can control it, insect identification is a key component of IPM."

In addition to the IPM information, the Penn State exhibit also will contain a display on the deregulation of electricity generation in Pennsylvania. Visitors will be able to pick up free fact sheets on choosing an electricity supplier. Those completing a survey on electricity deregulation consumer issues will receive a free refrigerator magnet.

The Farm Show opens to the public on January 10 and closes on January 15. Hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday through Wednesday and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday. Parking is $5 and admission is free.

Poster Contest Under Way

SUNBURY (Northumberland Co.) – Robert Pardoe Jr., chairman of the board of directors of the Northumberland County Conservation District, announces the annual poster contest cosponsored by Furman Foods of Northumberland and the conservation district is under way for students within Northumberland Count.

The contest, open to students in kindergarten through 12th grade, offers young people an opportunity to express their thoughts on natural resources through the medium of art.

"There are anywhere from 1,000 to 2,000 posters submitted in the annual contest, and the job of judging them can be quite challenging. But we feel it is worth the time and effort to give county students the opportunity to show through artwork what they know about environmental issues," said Pardoe. "In fact, we look forward to seeing the mix of ideas and talents."

Posters submitted to the conservation district can pertain to any environmental topic. However, for winning posters to advance to the state and national levels, they must pertain to one of two themes; 1) Wonders of Wildlife, emphasizing the relationship between wildlife habitat and proper land management, and 2) Nature's Web; Caring for the Land, the National Wildlife theme. Posters that win at the state level will advance to the national level.

Northumberland County Conservation District submitted a poster by Ian Chucoski of Shamokin in the 10-12th grade category to the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation District's state competition in July. Ian's poster won 1st place and has now been submitted to the National Association of Conservation District's contest.

Cash awards are provided by Furman Foods and this year there will be five categories: K-1, 2-3, 4-6, 7-9, and 10-12. First through eighth place ribbons in each grade category are provided by the conservation district as well as honorable mention certificates to those who enter outstanding posters. Posters for 1st through 8th place finishers will be displayed during the conservation district's annual awards banquet, March 12.

Pardoe said, "We encourage all county students to enter our contest, whether they attend public or private schools, including those who are home-schooled." For information on the poster contest, call the conservation district office at (717) 988-4224.

Rural, Urban Land Use Becoming Big Issue

COLUMBUS, Ohio — More and more legislation is being introduced in Ohio as the result of increasing challenges between farmers and non-farmers.

Urbanites who move out to the country are often seeking more space, a new home, a view and a "simpler" lilfe. Meanwhile, affected farmers either want to continue farming without competing with homeowners for farmland, or, at the other extreme, hope the urban sprawl skyrockets their land values so they can sell.

In many ways, farmland preservation has become an issue because the people and communities have decided to make it an issue, said Larry Libby, an agricultural economist who specializes in rural and urban policy at Ohio State University.

People are concerned for a variety of reasons. They might fear food will become scarce if urban sprawl continues. They see homes being built on farmland at an increasing rate and they want open spaces. Or, they see urban areas being abandoned in favor of newer communities.

They may recognize that land use influences water quality and affects wildlife habitats. They may also recognize that changes in land use affect their taxes and the quality of services they receive. Whatever the reason, Libby said, it has propelled land use into the legislative limelight.

Recently, the Rural Responsibility Act was introduced by state Sen. Karen Gillmor, R-Old Fort. The bill mainly looks at the environmental concerns of large-scale production farming. A provision in the bill requires people buying property within a one-mile radius of a farm to sign a disclosure that states they understand that normal farming practices might create noises and odors.

This is just one of the bills to arise since the Ohio Farmland Preservation Task Force released its recommendations earlier this year. A group of Ohio legislators is in the process of converting the recommendations into a single omnibus legislative bill, which includes authority for communities to purchase or lease development rights from farmers. The bill, which is tentatively slated to be introduced in early December, will also establish "agricultural security areas" where farming is clearly the top priority.

Security zones and purchase of development rights (PDR) programs reduce the uncertainty of the area's development, Libby explained. If farmers don't reinvest in the farm because they think the area will be developed soon, they become less competitive. Knowing that the farm will be able to operate without interference from development encourages farmers to maintain or even expand their businesses.

The most important implication of all these bills, whether they are passed or not, is simply that they have been proposed, Libby said. The task force, the legislation and other bills that address land use issues have given visibility to the issue of Ohio's shifting population and its effect on Ohio's agriculture.

For every 1 percent increase in population, urban land use increased 4.7 percent from 1960 to 1990, said Allen Prindle, an associate professor of economics at Otterbein College in Westerville, who compiled trends data for the task force. Prindle is taking a sabbatical this quarter and working at Ohio State University.

During 1982 to 1992, land used for farming decreased 120,000 acres a year, or 7.5 percent. And, the highest population growth is in counties surrounding metro areas, while population is on a decline or slow growth in the center cities. People also are moving out of the rural southeastern Ohio counties.

Urban sprawl is expensive. Although taxes in new suburbs are often higher, they are not high enough to pay for the new services, Libby said. People from non-farm areas tend to see open fields as unused space, when actually the fields are a key part of a food industry that is a major economic asset to the area.

"Some areas are going to continue to grow no matter what," Prindle said. "People involved in land use policies are trying to establish a balance between economic growth, both urban and rural, and protection of the natural and human resources used to support it."

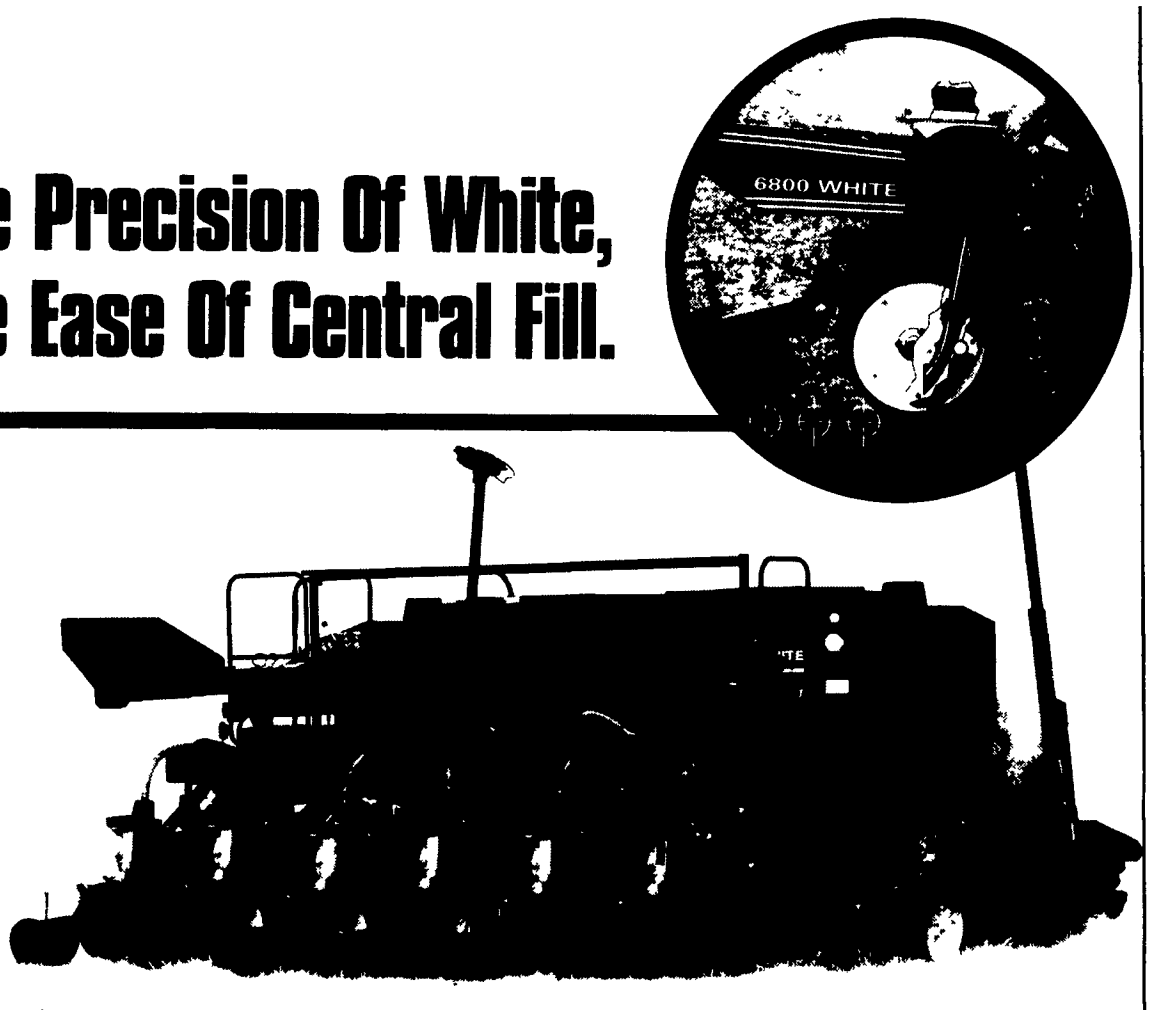
The Precision Of White, The Ease Of Central Fill.



The 6800 Series Central Fill Planters.

With the White 6800 Series planters, you get accurate seed placement, precise depth control, narrow row spacing, and central fill convenience in one planter. Its unique rigid frame positions row units at 30" for corn and 15" for soybeans and 10" for soybeans, wheat and other seed. The convenient seed meter control lets you adjust the seeding rate as you go, matching seed population to the yield potential of the soil.

Up to three gangs of row units power through thick, standing stalks and other heavy residue, while accurately and gently placing seed in the ground. A large, 35 bushel, single seed hopper is quicker to fill than individual row units, and it's more cost-efficient.

NAILE Names Junior Angus Champions

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. – A total of 145 females were exhibited by young Angus enthusiasts at the 1997 North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) Junior Angus Show.

Kevin Jensen, Courtland, Kan., selected champions from the entries at the event, which was held Nov 16 in Louisville, Ky.

Charolais-sired Smokies Increase Profit.

Market reports prove Charolais-sired Smokies consistently top the market. More pounds and a premium price paid per hundred weight increases profit for the commercial cow-calf producer Charolais-cross Smokies enter the feedlot sooner and realize heavier and more efficient gains This results in earlier marketing and added profits for producers.

As documented by the American-International Charolais Association (AICA) Beef–Charolais program, Charolais-sired cattle return more profit from the feedlot. The average added value returned on this program has been $8.36 per head with premiums paid as high as $43.97 per head Contact the AICA for information about the breed, commercial-focus programs, and local bull sale dates.

Raising Livestock Has Many Hazards

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Startled animals, manure gases, diseases, loud noises, and a lot of dust make raising livestock a dangerous occupation, said Ohio State University Extension Veterinarian Gary Bowman.

One out of every six injuries on the farm involve animals. No animal, no matter how gentle, can be completely trusted, especially if it is being subjected to something out of the ordinary.

"A dairy cow may let you handle her udder with no problem, but she may have a completely different personality if you're going to look at her foot," Bowman said.

When an animal gets excited or startled, it is not uncommon for a handler to be bitten, bruised, kicked, or run over. The mothering instinct makes female animals especially aggressive when producers handle newborns, and male animals can become hostile if someone interferes with breeding. In general, livestock producers should always be cautious and shouldn't trust bulls or boars, Bowman said.

Some animal breeds are more aggressive than others, so handlers should be aware of breed characteristics and dispositions.

"I've seen beef cattle remodel too many barns by crashing through fences or running into walls," Bowman said.

Even facilities can play a role. Poorly maintained chutes, fences, stalls and ramps make animals think escape is possible, so they become more active. Veterinarians often treat or diagnose animals in areas not designated for hospital work, and when the animals make sudden movements, the veterinarian get an accidental needle puncture.

Some things handlers can do to prevent animals aggression are to talk softly to them, approach them from the side and know their blind spots, be patient and don't make loud noises or quick movements. A nervous appearance, intent gaze and erect ears are common clues an animal is uneasy.

The animal environment itself poses some threats to producers. Handlers should be wary of certain livestock diseases that can spread to humans. Brucellosis and leptospirosis, for example, cause abortion, weak offspring, and lower conception rates in cattle, swine, sheep and goats. When transferred to humans, the result is fever, chills, sweating, weakness, vomiting, or diarrhea.

Producers should take proper preventative measures when working with sick animals to avoid becoming ill themselves, Bowman said. These measures include wearing plastic gloves when assisting an animal with birth, avoiding urine or birth fluid splashes, proper cleaning of contaminated areas, and treating animals promptly if signs of disease appear.

Some dairy and pig operations store manure in pits until it can be properly spread. Gases, such as methane, ammonia, carbon monoxide and hydrogen sulfide, can be released from the concentrated manure and suffocate or even kill humans and animals if not properly maintained.

"Hydrogen sulfide, which has a rotten egg smell, can cause unconsciousness in less than 30 seconds and death in minutes," Bowman said.

Prolonged exposure to manure pit gases at fairly low levels isn't immediately dangerous but can irritate the eyes, nose, mouth and throat or cause sneezing, loss of appetite, or pneumonia. When working around manure storage areas, people should make sure the area is properly ventilated, Bowman said.

Dust and noise also are problems in confined livestock operations. Some chronic effects of working in a dusty atmosphere are lung congestion, headaches, nasal irritation, cough, and shortness of breath. Masks or air filters should be worn when dust levels are high, he said. Prolonged loud noises, such as pigs squealing and machinery, could cause hearing loss that can be avoided with the use of ear muffs or plugs.

Although most animal-related injuries are not fatal, many people are needlessly injured each year because of a lack of safety awareness, Bowman said. To reduce exposure to livestock accidents or illness, understand animal behavior, provide proper and safe facilities, protect against transferable diseases, and wear personal protective equipment.

Milk Labels To Feature More Accurate Descriptive Names

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – If you enjoy milk but prefer to buy low-fat products, new labels on milk containers will help you to make the right choice, said a nutrition expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

J. Lynne Brown, associate professor of food science, explains that effective Jan. 1, 1998, the Food and Drug administration will no longer allow 2 percent milk to be called "low-fat." Instead, this milk category will be called "reduced-fat" milk.

"The dairy industry originally asked for an exemption from the terms of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act, because the industry felt the public had strongly identified with 2 percent as a healthy product," Brown said. "The new labeling will help the dairy industry in the long run because people are interested in low-fat products, and consumers like consistency in labeling."

The FDA definition of "low-fat" is 3 or fewer grams of fat per serving. A serving of milk is one 8-ounce glass. Brown says whole milk has 8 grams of fat per serving. Milk labeled 2 percent contains 5 grams of fat per serving, which means the dairy industry must label 2 percent milk as "reduced fat."

"Milk labeled 1 percent has 2.5 grams of fat per serving, so it can be called a low-fat product," Brown said. "Skim milk has .5 or less grams of fat per serving, which fits the FDA definition of a fat-free product. It still will be called skim milk."

Brown points out that dairies can still list fat content on the front of the milk carton as 1 percent or 2 percent, but the 2 percent products cannot be advertised or labeled as low-fat.

"The new labels make the fat content claims of dairy products comparable to other foods," Brown said. "The dairy industry will really have more flexibility in differentiating its low fat and fat-free products, and consumers can make a more informed choice at the supermarket."

Reagan Retires After 40 Years Service

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) – William A. Reagan, extension agent in Franklin County, will retire effective Dec. 31, 1997 from Penn State Cooperative Extension Service after 40 years of service.

A native of Plainfield Township, Northhampton County, Reagan is an expert on farm financial management programs. He has been deeply involved in such issues as livestock programs, land-use planning, agricultural land preservation, and water quality. He has helped establish 13 agricultural security areas comprising more than 74,000 acres of farmland.

William A. Regan

"At the extension office, our role is education," Reagan said. "I like providing information, education, and assistance to people so they can make informed decisions. That's what extension does best."

Regan has established a successful 4-H Tractor Safety Program, working with more than 1,700 young people over his career. He has been involved with 4-H Livestock Clubs since 1956. He also supervised the count's farm safety programs for youth and adults.

Regan earned a bachelor's in agricultural economics from Penn State in 1952. After a two-year stint in the U.S. Army from 1954 to 1956, Regan joined Penn State Cooperative Extension in 1956 as an assistant county agent in Franklin County.

He was promoted to associate extension agent in 1961. That year, he also earned his masters in rural sociology from Penn State. Regan earned a promotion to extension agent in 1974, and became senior extension agent in 1982.

Regan's professional awards include the 1988 National Association of County Agricultural Agents' Distinguished Service Award, the Safety Award from the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council, and the Penn State 25-year Award.

He is a member of the National and Pennsylvania Association of County Agricultural Agents and Epsilon Sigma Phi, the national extension fraternity. He also is a member of the The Chambersburg Rotary Club, the Chambersburg Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, and St. John's United Church of Christ in Chambersburg.

Agricultural Preservation Board Approves Farmland

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – The Agricultural Land Preservation Board has approved easement purchases for 12 farms encompassing 2,023 acres of prime farmland at its regular meeting.

"Gov. Tom Ridge and I are committed to protecting Pennsylvania's agricultural heritage and its prime farmlands," said Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr., who chairs the board. "Through easements such as these, we will insure that the Commonwealth's tradition of the family farm continues for future generations."

Created in 1989, the Pennsylvania Agricultural Land Preservation Board is responsible for the oversight of the state Farmland Preservation Program. The program allows the state and counties to purchase development rights, referred to as easements, to guarantee that farms will remain as agricultural land.

Following is a list of the 12 properties, including owner, township, acreage and purchase cost.

ADAMS COUNTY

– Harold L. and Betty D. King, Huntington Township, 231 acres, $316,169;

BERKS COUNTY

– Allen A. and Jane M. Davis, Maidencreek and Richmond townships, 177 acres, $234,460;

–Noel and Elizabeth Schlegel, Maxatawny and Longswamp townships, 171 acres, $342,200;

FRANKLIN COUNTY

– Meyersland Dairy, Peters Township, 105 acres, $126,225;

LANCASTER COUNTY

– David H. and Norma J. Frey, Manor Township, 144 acres $278,767;

–Francis L. and Ethel V. Kirk, Fulton Township, 354 acres, $357,651;

– Ben E. Mann, West Lampeter Township, 203 acres, $458,799;

– Henry S. and Katie N. Zimmerman, Clay Township, 59 acres, $136,808;

LEHIGH COUNTY

– Willard A. and Ruby H. Kistler, Heidelberg Township, 182 acres, $309,059;

MONTGOMERY COUNTY

– Melvin E. Haas, Upper Hanover Township, 44 acres, $170,703;

Robert R., Maxwell and John Wood, New Hanover Township, 73 acres, $328,270; and

UNION COUNTY

– Dietrich Brother Partnership, Buffalo Township, 268 acres, 267,000.

Including the easements approved today, and two county-owned easements, 845 farms in 37 counties have had easements approved, protecting 107,627 acres of prime farmland. With the addition of Somerset and Wyoming counties, there are now 44 counties with approved programs for farmland preservation.

In October, Gov. Ridge joined in a celebration of the preservation of 100,000 acres of Pennsylvania farmland, making Pennsylvania second in the nation in numbers of acres preserved in perpetuity. He also signed an executive order calling for continued cooperation among state and local agencies to protect farmland.

Seed Sizing Brings Growers First Choices

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc's Precision Designed™ Seed Sizing System will offer corn growers greater convenience during planting along with improved availability of the right corn genetics in the size appropriate for their needs, according to Bob Heimbaugh, Pioneer corn product manager.

"The Precision Designed system will allow corn growers to get their top choices in superior corn hybrids without the limitation of seed size. In addition, these standardized sizes will reduce or eliminate the time required to adjust the planter when changing hybrids, so producers can plant more acres per day," said Heimbaugh.

"The Precision Designed system is exclusive to Pioneer and will replace the company's traditional Custom Design (CD) method of sizing seed," said Heimbaugh The new system is based on seed shape (medium rounds and medium flats). Seed will be labeled as Precision Designed Flats (PDF™) flats or Precision Designed Rounds (PDR™) rounds.

The Precision Designed system standardizes and consolidates the number of kernel sizes from the current seven sizes common for most hybrids to four sizes, with potentially 75 to 95 percent of the volume in the new PDF flats and PDR rounds sizes. The new system also will offer some hybrids in F13 and R22.

More than 26,000 corn growers and crop consultants across the U.S. and Canada evaluated the plantability of corn seed that was sized using the Precision Designed system. Some 655,000 80K bags were evaluated using all types of planters.

Paul McPherson of New Park, Pa., found the Precision Designed seed worked well in his 7200 series John Deere planter. Because of his machine has a finger-picked seed metering system, he didn't expect to have any problems with the new seed size.

"The Precision Designed seed worked well. We got a good, consistent stand," McPherson reported. For this York County grower, the greatest benefit to the precision Designed Seed system may very well be getting the majority of this hybrids in the same standardized size. McPherson raises 700 acres of corn in 180 fields. He typically has his planter units set by his local John Deere dealer each spring and fine tunes it as needed. With standardized seed size, the time needed to fine tune planter settings across 180 fields will be reduced.

Seed sized as CD2 is what Dan Magnus of White Hall, Md., typically plants. In 1997, Magnus planted eight units of PDR rounds using a Kinze eight-row planter which has been modified to 22-inch rows. Picket fence plant spacing is even more critical in narrow rows, and for Magnus, the new seed size met his expectations.

"I usually do a stand check as I'm respraying after emergence. I shoot for a population of 30,000," Magnus said. "Using the PDR rounds, I got a good, even stand. I was very pleased with the new size."

Reconditioning and calibrating planter meters are services Gregg Sauder offers from Precision Planting, his farm-based business near Tremont, Ill. Using his specially designed test stand to calibrate meters last spring, Sauder had the opportunity to use both PDF flats and PDR rounds brought to him by customers. He successfully set meters to plant either size.

"With the planters I have set, the new sizing system has been very plantable. I've been setting planters for five years, and Pioneer's seed is always consistent," Sauder said. "I think they have very good quality control on seed sizing, and I don't expect there will be any concerns with these new sizes in the future." Sauder sets nearly 1,000 planter meters each year and also farms 1,300 acres.

The Precision Designed system will offer more planter flexibility than the current CD system. Because the new sizes are separated by shape, both will accurately meter through planters plates. Planting characteristics for PDF flats are similar to F14 and F15 with PDR rounds similar to R23 and R24.

Exchangeability between PDF flats and PDR rounds or vice versa will be very acceptable, helping reduce the number of planter disc changes required during planting. Both PDF flats and PDR rounds will utilize the same disk with slight adjustments in vacuum or air-pressure settings, Heimbaugh said.

Exchangeability will be an added boost in years with delayed planting as seed exchange will be faster and more efficient. This, in turn, will help ensure growers receive the hybrids they prefer on a timely basis.

For more information about the Precision Designed seed sizing system and assistance in selecting the appropriate genetic package, Heimbaugh advises growers to visit with their local Pioneer seed provider.

Maryland Sheep Exported To The Caribbean

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley has announced that Debnam Sales & Exports of Still Pond, Maryland, recently sold sheep and hogs to Trinidad and Tobago.

The company is owned by George Debnam and has been developing an export market for beef cattle, hogs and hair-type sheep.

Twenty-six Katahdin sheep and three hogs were flown to Trinidad on Nov. 23. The average price of a Katahdin sheep is $750 delivered.

Working closely with Debnam Sales & Exports and the Ministry of Agriculture of Trinidad and Tobago, the Maryland Department of Agriculture and United States Livestock Genetic Export, Inc. arranged the sale as part of their ongoing effort to improve the genetic bloodlines of sheep in Trinidad and Tobago.

Several of the Katahdin sheep will be included in a research progarm at the University of the West Indies. The University is interested in documenting the genetic superiority of the Katahdin and will be using sheep purchased from Debnam Sales & Exports in their evaluation process.

NFU's Swenson Named To Commission on 21st Century Agriculture

DENVER, CO. – President Bill Clinton has named National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson to the Commission on 21st Century Production Agriculture. Swenson is one of the president's three appointees to the commission, which was mandated in the Federal Agriculture Improvements and Reform Act of 1996 (FAIR).

"I am extremely honored to have been named to serve on this commission which will review the impact of the FAIR legislation on producers' incomes, production options and marketing opportunities," Swenson said.

NFU members view the sweeping changes of the latest farm bill as a mixed bag. Swenson said most producers he represents like the planting flexibility, but the price volatility of commodities over the past two years has made it difficult to make long-term decisions for their operations. The farm leader also noted that all proposals made during the farm bill debate included flexibility in planting decisions.

NFU's recommendation during the 1996 farm bill debate included a marketing loan program that would enable producers to get their income from the market. NFU has opposed decoupling, or disassociation of government payments from production, such as those provided under FAIR. "We must be sure the tools of any farm bill empower producers to enhance their incomes through the market and not via systems which only empower the already very concentrated market system," Swenson said.

"This commission will be the primary vehicle for recommending policy to Congress and the Clinton administration. It is vitally important to producers," Swenson said.

Swenson will urge the commission to recommend raising commodity loan rates, which were frozen at artificially low 1995 levels. He will also support reintroduction of a farmer-owned reserve program to safeguard against shortages, both domestically and for the United States' reputation as a reliable supplier of high-quality grain for its foreign grain buyers.

In addition, Swenson intends to call for risk management measures promised under FAIR. "We were promised that as government supports decreased, producers would have an opportunity to participate in federal risk management programs, but that hasn't fully materialized," Swenson said.

National Farmers union is a general farm organization representing nearly 30,000 family farmers and ranchers nationwide. NFU serves it membership by assisting with education, by providing stimulus and know-how for farmer-owned cooperatives and by presenting the organization's policies to lawmakers at the local, state and national levers.
